U. S. Protests Arrest of 15 Churchmen By Bulgaria

Calls Spy Charges 'Ludicrous'; Sofia Authorities Reject American Complaint

By The Associated Press

The United States formally protested yesterday against Communist Bulgaria's arrest of 15 Protestant churchmen as blatant terrorism, and declared the spy charges against them were "unfounded and ludicrous." Bulgaria rejected the protest.

Church organizations also condemned the Bulgarian move even as the Sofia regime built up its case for the trail Friday.

A 55-page booklet was issued in Sofia, containing purported depositions of the 15 accused of treason, espionage and black market money dealings involving Britons and Americans.

Bulgaria Next on List

"Religion happened to be a cloak for their criminal activities," said the booklet, printed in French and English. "The 15 men were caught red-handed."

It was part of a trend in Iron Curtain countries which western church officials in Geneva, a European listening post, said was moving with the precision of a timetable. They suggested the pattern was so planned and executed it appeared to have been dictated by a central authority, possibly the Cominform. Hungary's swift arrest and trial of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, the Roman Catholic primate, was cited.

The British Council of Churches said a secret order had been issued by Communist headquarters in Bulgaria for a campaign against the Evangelical churches there. The churches include the Baptist, Methodist, Congregational and Pentecostal.

The order was quoted as saying: The growing activities of the Evangelical Church in our country is lately closely connected with the mad activity of the imperialists inciting a new war and obstructing the progress of democracy and socialism."

Pastors Forced to Join Party

The council said pastors and priests were forced by threats to join the Communist Party; that 30 or 40 were arrested in 1948 and 15 were tried; that pastors' families were tormented.

The Joint Committee of Religious Liberty, representing the council and the Conference of British Missionary Societies, adopted a resolution saying it "views with profound concern the denial of full religious liberty in Hungary, Bulgaria and other parts of southeast Europe."

The American note, delivered in Sofia by Charge d'Affaires Sidney E. Donoghue, said the U. S. Government "reserves its rights under the treaty of peace with Bulgaria and requests that facilities be made available for representatives of the United States Legation to attend the trial."

The phrase, "reserves its rights,"

Process Claimed For Canning of Tasty, Fresh Milk

Chicago, Feb. 23 (AP).—A way has been found to can fresh milk so that it can be kept several weeks without losing any of the fresh milk taste, the Chicago Tribune said tonight.

"Tremendous savings are in store for the Nation's consumers as a result of the discovery," the article said. "Already canned milk has been sent parcel post from Chicago to Valparaiso, Ind., at a transportation charge of 3 cents a quart whereas now the housewife is paying around 5 cents a quart delivery costs to have milk deposited at her doorstep."

The Tribune credited Jack Stambaugh, Valparaiso dairy farmer and implement dealer, and Dr. Roy Graves, described as formerly a top scientist with the United States Department of Agriculture's dairy husbandry division, with discovering the process.

Says She 'Loved' America

Axis Sally Insists She Swore Allegiance To Nazis Under Duress, Spurned Spy Deal

MILDRED GILLARS

"AXIS SALLY"

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Miss Mildred E. (Axis Sally) Gillars yesterday declared in District Court that she had signed an oath of allegiance to Germany under duress but shortly afterward she testified that she had spurned an espionage deal offered by a Nazi secret service major.

Sobbing brokenly, the tired-looking 48-year-old defendant told the court that she flung defiance at the officer with: "Major Denner, I want you to know even though I'm working for the German broadcasting company, . . . I'd never . . . even if it meant death . . . do anything against my country!"

It was with these words, Miss Gillars testified, that she rejected a suggestion from the official that she give him some information about the Wright plane plant in Dayton, Ohio.

The defendant said she had been left without a passport—the American Consul in Berlin having taken up her original papers in 1941—leaving her, she said, suspected by the dread Gestapo.

It was in connection with securing protective papers she said that she came into contact with "Major Denner."

"I was told by someone that I'd come to the attention of the secret service . . . this woman told me I must never breathe it to anyone—of course, now we're outside Germany, so I don't feel I'm violating a confidence—she told me to see a certain Major Denner at a certain address—that he would see me privately. She said he would give any kind of passport "if you will do espionage work."

"When I met him he was very charming. He said 'what kind of papers have you?' I said 'Well, I have none.' He asked 'Don't you think we're rather generous to let you run around without papers?'

"I told him 'yes.' He asked me if I didn't realize the danger I was in. I said 'yes.' Then he said, 'Can you tell me anything about the Wright plane works in Dayton, Ohio?'"

Here Miss Gillars, clasping her throat with dark-red painted fingernails, tearfully testified how she answered she would sooner die.

"I told him," she testified, "'If you can't give me a passport, all right . . . you can do with me as you wish.'"

The defendant earlier had told how she had left home "with $20 in my pocket" in search of a stage career—a vocation objected to violently by her mother.

After a series of tours with stock companies, road shows and vaudeville acts, her adventurous career led her to Algiers, North Africa, in January, 1933.

She had a male friend in the British consulate there, she said. She worked as a governess for a while with a family, but "the boy was recalcitrant." Then, she testified, she worked as a dress model.

From Africa she moved on to Naples, Rome, Vienna, Hungary, and finally, Berlin. She said she had arranged to meet her mother in Budapest and that the latter there agreed to finance Miss Gillars' art and dramatic studies.

But later, she testified, "I received a letter from my mother that due to financial reverses she couldn't keep her promise."

Miss Gillars testified she was forced to take the oath of allegiance after she castigated Japan

Recovery Is Realized, Britain Says

ERP Aid Praised In 'Remarkable' Achievement; Trade Balance in Sight

Lake Success, Feb. 23 (NYHT).—Britain told the United Nations today that British factories are breaking all records in production of capital goods and that thanks to British discipline and American financial aid, British economic recovery is virtually complete.

This optimistic picture, given to the United Nations Economic and Social Council by Christopher P. Mayhew, British Undersecretary of State, contained the revelation that despite a "disturbing" dollar deficit, Britain is now definitely within sight of balancing her foreign trade.

That "remarkable" achievement, Mayhew told the delegates, was made possible through economic planning and the voluntary cooperation of labor and industry, and it found British exports last month rising to a figure that was 60 per cent higher than in 1938.

Mayhew reported that Britain has built 700 new factories since the war ended, that industrial output was 20 per cent higher than in 1938 and that agricultural output was 25 per cent higher.

Against Communist arguments that Marshall Plan aid was designed by the United States to enslave the recipients, the British diplomat said the charge was ridiculous, and added:

"It (American aid) is enabling us to win our way back through high production to complete economic independence. The purpose of Marshall aid is to set us free from dependence on America. We have not the slightest intention of modifying our economic, our social or our political plan in order to qualify for aid."

Again, he said, "in our view, the United States do not want a dependent Britain. She wants us to have a healthy, independent economy, standing on its own feet. As we see it, they aim for us to stand freely side by side with the United States, learning freely from each other, and ready to defend, if need be, those human ideals of personal freedom and integrity that we hold in common."

The longest speech of the day came from Polish Delegate Julius Katzsuchy, and it was almost entirely a political attack on the United States. He repeated all the Communist arguments against the Marshall Plan and introduced figures that he said proved that all the recipient countries would be hurt—not helped—by the American aid.

The Polish delegate said the current main feature of United States economy was "instability." The United States, he charged, is trying to cling to prosperity by pouring billions into war expenditures, and this "reflects upon the capitalist system and is an admission that the system is losing social reason for existence."

Major Step to Peace in Holy Land

Israel, Egypt Sign Armistice; Other Arab States Lining Up

Rhodes (Thursday), Feb. 24 (AP).—Israel and Egypt signed an armistice today that represented a major step toward restoring peace to the Holy Land.

Other Arab states began lining up to sign similar pacts with Israel, a fledgling state that proved its strength with victories on the field of battle.

Dr. Ralph Bunche, acting United Nations mediator who worked incessantly since January 13 to get both Israelis and Egyptians to agree, said other Arab states would sign similar pacts.

Trans-Jordan will start talks with Israel here on Monday. King Abdullah's nation also will represent Iraq, which has agreed to accept pacts suitable to Egypt, Syria, Lebanon and Trans-Jordan. Saudi Arabia told Bunche it does not need an armistice because Saudi Arabia has no independent front in the Palestine war.

Israel has already held preliminary talks with Lebanon.

A seven-man armistice commission, made up of three Egyptians, three Jews and Brig. Gen. William Riley, chief of staff of U. N. truce observers in Palestine, as chairman, will supervise carrying out of the armistice.

Commission headquarters will be in El Auja, a town on the Egyptian border which was demilitarized and quit by the Israelis.

The Israeli forces also will be withdrawn from Bir Asluj, which is south of Beersheba on the strategic north-south inner highway.

Measure Calls for Top Expenditure of 308 Millions Yearly For Next 40 Years

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A gigantic housing measure—largest in the Nation's history — yesterday won the approval of a Senate Banking subcommittee.

The bill, a compromise between Administration and Republican-sponsored programs, calls for an estimated maximum expenditure of 308 million dollars per year for the next 40 years.

It provides for:

1. The building of 810,000 Government-financed public housing units over the next six years.

Slum Clearance Program

2. A 1½-billion-dollar slum clearance program in the form of loans and grants to States and municipalities.

3. A $262,500,000 rural housing program.

4. An extensive program of Government aid to housing research and a national housing census in 1950.

The public housing section is a compromise between President Truman's request for 1,050,000 units over the next seven years and a Senate Republican bill for 600,000 units in six years.

The subcommittee approved the measure after a six-hour executive session. Chairman John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) said the final compromise went through without objection, although Senators John W. Bricker (R., Ohio) and Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) will try to amend it in the full committee today.

Other Legislation Planned

Sparkman said the subcommittee will start work immediately on further legislation to aid the lower middle income groups not eligible for public housing and to improve FHA financing.

There is a strong possibility, Sparkman said, that both bills will be presented to the Senate simultaneously.

Bricker and Cain, both of whom are cool to all public housing proposals, will offer an amendment today to require the outlawing of segregation or religious discrimination in public housing projects.

Sparkman commented that the two Republicans were being entirely "consistent." Neither, he said, wants Government subsidized housing for anyone, Negro or white, and the amendment, if adopted, would be sure "to kill the whole bill."

Another Bricker amendment would prohibit any employe of a Federal, State or local government from living in a public housing project.

A third Bricker amendment would limit occupancy of public housing projects to families making less than $1200 a year, except in cities of 100,000 population or

Vaughan Gets New Medal, From Mexico

Church Head Calls on Truman to Apologize For Use of 'S. O. B.'

By The Associated Press

Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan got another foreign decoration last night as a church leader protested President Truman's use of the term "S. O. B." in defending his White House aide's acceptance of an Argentine medal.

The latest award to Vaughan came from the Mexican government as he and 26 other Americans were honored for their demonstrations of "good neighborliness."

The Mexican Ambassador, Rafael de la Colina, pinned the decoration of Military Merit First Class on Mr. Truman's military aide. Among others receiving it were Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, retired Chief of Staff of the United States Air Force, and Gen. Jacob L. Devers.

The Mexican government also awarded the Order of the Aztec Eagle to 16 American civilians, including former Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York and Nelson Rockefeller.

Meanwhile, the Rev. Carl McIntire, president of the International Council of Christian Churches, called on Mr. Truman to "apologize to the American people" for using the "S. O. B." term.

In an off-the-cuff talk to a reserve officers' meeting Tuesday night honoring Vaughan, the President had said that he is not going to let any "S. O. B." influence his appointments. Later the expression was deleted in the official transcript and "anyone" was substituted.

Clues Blow Up In Murder of Rich Virginian

New Orleans, Feb. 25 (AP).—Police said two leads in the slaying of Virginia millionaire James A. Mahoney had blown up tonight and they were "back where we started at the beginning of this case."

Acting Detective Chief John Jackson said two men and a woman taken into custody at Mobile after flying there in a private chartered plane today had shown they had no connection with the case. One of the men was said to be from Washington, D. C.

At the same time, Jackson added, it now appears that two young boys taken in custody at Pass Christian after arriving there on a bus from New Orleans had accounted for their stay in New Orleans.

Mahoney's neck was broken and his head smashed in a New Orleans hotel Monday.

All those questioned at Gulfport and Mobile denied any knowledge of the murder.

At Mobile Detective Chief Talley Rollins identified those questioned there as Ann King of Birmingham, Ala., Oliver Kriebl, Chicago merchant seaman, and Augustus H. Cottrell, 44, of Washington D. C.

Jackson said Cottrell will be held in Mobile until authorities have made a check with Federal parole authorities to determine if Cottrell has violated a parole. He said Cottrell said he was released from a Florida Federal Penitentiary Feb. 13

4 Overcome At Bolling Air Base Fire

D. C. Units Respond To 2 Alarms to Fight Blaze at Post Chapel

Four firemen were overcome by smoke early today when fire partially destroyed Chapel No. 2 at Bolling Air Base.

The fire, discovered at 12:40 a. m., brought two alarms for Washington firemen, who joined the four base fire companies in fighting the blaze.

The chapel, a wooden structure of the conventional Army type, was about a block from the Bolling runways. It was built in 1941.

An Air Force spokesman said the fire was discovered by 1st Lieut. Junior Vierhman, 31, of Orlando, Fla., a Bolling Base officer, who was returning to his quarters when he saw the flames coming from the chapel entrance.

Flames rose as high as the chapel spire before the fire was brought under control.

Eight engine companies, three truck companies, an ambulance, two rescue squad wagons and three chiefs and deputy chiefs responded from the Washington Fire Department in response to alarms sounded at 12:47 and 1 a. m.

Fuel to Labor Law Dispute

Negroes Ask Congress to Ban Unions' Race Discrimination

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The smoldering civil rights issue yesterday was injected into the already blazing congressional dispute over new labor legislation.

Spokesmen for two Negro organizations appeared before the final public session of the Senate Labor Committee and demanded that union discrimination against Negro workers be banned by any new labor law.

Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (D., Minn.), who led the successful fight to include the civil rights program in the Democratic platform for the 1947 campaign, immediately declared he would support such an antidiscrimination provision in the upcoming labor law fight. Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) announced he, too, would back such a provision.

Leading T-H Act Foe

Politically, Humphrey and Taft are poles apart. Humphrey is a leading opponent of the Taft-Hartley Management-Labor Relations Act, which the Truman Administration is seeking to repeal and replace with a so-called improved version of the Wagner Act.

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), who opposes both the Taft-Hartley Act and the Administration substitute—and who has long been a champion of civil rights—declared he would oppose the request of the Negro spokesmen. Morse insisted that civil rights legislation must be taken up in a single, separate package, so as not to confuse other issues pending in Congress.

Edgar G. Brown, speaking for the National Negro Council, and Elmer W. Henderson, for the American Council on Human Rights, urged that any benefits accruing to unions under the new labor law be withheld from those unions which discriminate against Negroes.

Brown charged the 17 AFL international unions limit membership to "Caucasian, Christian" workers, and that others offer only segregated, auxiliary membership.

Recess Declared

After nearly four weeks of public hearings, with some 50 witnesses testifying, the Senate Labor Committee wearily recessed just before 6 p. m. Some 200 others had wanted to testify, but had to be turned down for lack of time.

Originally the committee had voted 8-5, on party lines, to limit the debate to February 10, but

Anti-Filibuster Fight Is Set For Monday

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A sectionally-riven Democratic caucus yesterday decided to proceed with anti-filibuster legislation in the Senate on Monday, despite these repercussions:

1. Southern Democrats served notice of a filibuster and warned that major Administration legislation may get lost in the talkfest.

2. Senate Republican leaders applauded the decision to proceed against filibusters, but like the Southerners indicated they will oppose any move to lay the rules change aside for important Administration bills.

The Democratic leadership had agreed on an "on and off" drive against filibusters starting Monday. They laid their plan before a full caucus of Senate Democrats yesterday.

The plan was to call up the rules change, empowering two-thirds of the Senate to shut off debate on any matter, and immediately displace it with the Administration's reciprocal trade extension bill.

Once the trade bill was passed, they planned to give the antifilibuster legislation another fling until rent control, the Taft-Hartley repealer, or another major White House bill came along. The idea was not to let the Southern filibuster interfere with other major business.

Yesterday's caucus played hob with that plan. In the first place, Northern Democrats forced the conference to agree to keep anti-filibuster legislation before the Senate at least a week before talking about reciprocal trade or any other legislation.

In the second place, Senate Republicans and some Southern Democrats let it be known they may not vote to shelve the rules

Communist Teaching on Genetics

Oregon State Professor Fired For Backing Lysenko's Theory

Corvallis, Oreg., Feb. 23 (AP).—The president of Oregon State University said today he had dismissed an associate chemistry professor for supporting the Russian Communist Lysenko's genetics teachings.

The president, Dr. A. L. Strand, called a special meeting of the entire faculty to hear his charges against Dr. Ralph Spitzer.

Spitzer and L. R. LaValle, assistant professor of economics, were notified last week that their contracts would not be renewed at the end of the term. The two issued public protests, asserting they were released because they belonged to the Progressive Party.

"The action taken had no relation to whether the men in question are members of the Progressive Party," Dr. Strand said.

He made no further reference to La Valle. But he asserted that Spitzer, in a letter to the Chemical and Engineering News of January 31, supported the "charlatan" Lysenko in opposition to the world's leading geneticists.

[Lysenko, currently in high favor in Russia, argues that environment is the prime factor in determining characteristics of an individual. This conflicts with Mendel's Law, which holds that characteristics appear in a definite mathematical ratio through generations and can be accurately predicted.—Editor's note:]

"Taken by itself," Dr. Strand said, "Dr. Spitzer's letter in behalf of a completely discredited effort on the part of the Soviet government to subjugate science to its own political ends might be excused as an unfortunate mistake in judgment. But taken along with his pro-Soviet propaganda, the letter shows up in its true light and its import cannot be overlooked.

"Any scientist who has such poor power of discrimination so as to choose to support Lysenko's genetics against all the weight of evidence against it is not much of a scientist or has lost the freedom that an instructor or investigator should possess."

Spitzer and La Valle said they were appealing to the faculty appeals committee and to the American Association of University Professors.

Maryland Mental Health Set-up Called Inadequate, Barbaric

By James Hague
Post Reporter

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 23.—The Council of Psychiatric Societies sent to Governor Lane today an 11,000 word report detailing its month-long analysis of Maryland's mental hygiene system and suggesting corrective measures.

The council found:

1. Maryland's mental hospitals have never been reorganized in the light of present-day knowledge, the existing condition being compared to what would exist if general hospitals were denied the use of new drugs in the treatment of infectious diseases.

2. The present commissioner of mental hygiene lacks the authority to perform the duties assigned to him, the present system being one business trying to run as five independent businesses.

3. Overcrowding has resulted in conditions which are "not only barbaric but wasteful of lives and money."

4. A 300-400-bed psychiatric hospital is needed to serve as the cornerstone of a mental hygiene program.

5. The teaching of pyschiatry to medical students at the University of Maryland has "been far from adequate with the result that a large number of physicians practicing in Maryland are grossly

Interior Department Acts

Segregation Ordered Lifted On 18 District Tennis Courts

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

The Interior Department yesterday told the District Recreation Department to open up 18 segregated tennis courts to joint use by whites and Negroes.

The order was contained in a letter to Recreation Board Director Harry S. Wender from Secretary of the Interior J. A. Krug.

The communication stated the courts at five of the city's recreation areas are on Federal park land, and subject to the Interior Department's policy of nonsegregation.

Courts at four of the areas are designated by the Recreation Board as "white" and at the fifth as "colored."

The "white" courts are located in Anacostia, Garfield, Montrose and Rock Creek Parks, and the "colored" court is at Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway, at Francis Recreation Center.

Wender was told to redesignate the five areas as "open units" and so to list them on permits issued by the Recreation Department.

Krug also asked Wender to submit copies of all 1949 permits which the Recreation Department issues for other activities on Federal park lands. These primarily are for use of picnic areas and baseball and softball fields.

House Group Okays Spy System Bill

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Legislation giving the Central Intelligence Agency full legal authority to operate a foreign spy system was approved unanimously yesterday at a closed-door session of the House Armed Services Committee.

Members said the bill is deliberately phrased in general terms and that Congress will be asked to approve it without a detailed explanation.

"There are a lot of things in this bill that we cannot discuss here or on the floor of the House," Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) said of the hush-hush measure.

At the same time, the committee approved other defense measures authorizing:

1. The Air Force to build—with Canadian help—a radar-warning network around North America. Stations would be built at secret locations in the Far North and along the coasts to give early warning of air raids. Ultimate cost to the United States is estimated at 161 million dollars.

2. Establishment of 3000-mile long test range for guided missiles. Costing an estimated 200 million dollars, the range will consist of a large "closed area" launching site, complete with laboratories, and "impact" and control areas along the 3000-mile line.

Major purpose of the Central Intelligence Agency bill is to give it permanent legal status and definite authority to ignore many of the general rules applying to other Government offices.

Aliens who help American intelligence agents abroad and refugees from Iron Curtain countries who have important data to reveal could be given sanctuary in the United States under the bill. Up to 100 such "defectors" from Communism could be admitted annually without regard to immigration rules.

At present, immigration laws bar aliens with "subversive" backgrounds, as would be the case of many former Communists or revolutionaries. Aliens admitted under the bill would be eligible for citizenship.

Other sections of the bill would free the CIA of telling the General Accounting Agency just how it has spent its money and of informing the Civil Service Commission as to who they have hired or even how many people are on the payroll.

Central Intelligence has been acting under extra-legal powers to date in this respect, Congressmen said.

Later Vinson talked with President Truman about the much-discussed 70-group air force which Vinson has strongly supported.

He would not reveal Mr. Truman's position but he said that the Administration plans for a 48-group air force had not changed his own personal advocacy of the 70-group force.

And Funerals

Diplomats' Guide Covers Girls, Bores

London, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—The Foreign Office red-facedly admitted today that it had distributed a book of manners to its up-and-coming young diplomats abroad advising them to make friends at funerals, not to get lost in the ambassador's garden with "some girl," and how to behave with bores.

Whitehall ordered an investigation to discover how news of the book leaked out. It was supposed to be highly confidential, but the details were published in press dispatches from Washington.

The Foreign Office's Emily Post was Marcus Cheke, 44-year-old vice-marshal of the diplomatic corps in London.

The title of his book is "Guidance on Foreign Usages and Ceremony for a Member of His Majesty's Foreign Service on His First Appointment to a Post Abroad."

The hero of the work is a mythical young John Bull who has been named third secretary to His Majesty's Ambassador to Mauretania, Sir Henry Sealing Wax.

The book held up to John the shining example of the Netherlands third secretary who spends the perfect diplomat's day.

"He lunches with a banker, takes cocktails in one of the other legations, dines with a deputy, spends the evening in the house of a hostess who is a close friend of the finance minister."

Then comes the advice:

"Mr. and Mrs. Bull must turn up for dinner at the Ambassador's five minutes early.

"Mr. Bull should speak to the Ambassadress at least once in the evening, and must not, therefore, spend an entire hour lost in the garden with some girl."

On the subject of bores, it said:

"One of John Bull's chief duties will be to be affable to bores. There are always to be found at official parties, some personages whose talk and influence have caused them to be invited, but who are devoid of social graces and consequently stand around in dreamy isolation. It is incumbent on Mr. and Mrs. Bull, not only to avoid standing in gloomy silence themselves, but to prevent others from doing so.

"It is a good idea to learn bridge to avoid making conversation with some boring, important old lady," the book counseled.

It noted that some women "make a point of knowing all the Capital's latest love affairs, and gossip of this sort, however trivial, may prevent Sir Henry Sealing Wax from inviting to the same dinner two officials who are at daggers drawn."

Finally, on funerals, the book advised:

"Don't pass up funerals. In some countries, public funerals are unrivalled as occasions on which to cultivate acquaintances.

"How many an interesting political connection was first conceived, by a certain foreign head of a mission, by a convulsive handshake in a funeral cortege and cemented by a lift home in a sedan."

Eben Ayers, assistant press secretary, who met reporters yesterday, brushed aside queries by saying:

But the Rev. Mr. McIntire demanded further words from the President on the subject. He sent this telegram to the White House.

"The language you used last night at the dinner to honor Maj. Gen. Vaughan is an offense to Christian people, degrading to our youth and humiliating before the nations of the world, and, I believe, unbecoming to an occupant of the high office of the Presidency of the United States.

Radio Listeners Given Paraphrase of 'S. O. B.'

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—President Truman's "S. O. B." reference in a talk last night did not reach radio listeners in that form, spokesmen for the Nation's four major networks said today.

Nearly all news commentators paraphrased the initials to "so-and-so" or "blankety-blank" or said the President used "strong language" in defending his military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan.

Hoover Group To Ask Service Head Rank Cut

By The Associated Press

The Hoover Commission, after two swings of opinion, has definitely decided to recommend the "demotion" of the Secretaries of Army, Navy and Air to Undersecretary rank, it was learned yesterday.

Chairman Herbert Hoover was outvoted in the 8-to-4 decision of the Commission on Government Reorganization, after a seesaw debate lasting for weeks, according to persons closely acquainted with the issue.

The majority held that greater power must be centralized in the Secretary of Defense, to curb "extravagance," discourage old rivalries, and make the merger of the armed forces a reality.

The report will be issued shortly, it was learned, accompanied by the dissenting views of former President Hoover and these three other members of the bipartisan commission:

Former Representative Carter Manasco, Alabama Democrat; Arthur S. Flemming, president of Ohio Wesleyan University and former Civil Service Commissioner, and George H. Mead, Ohio paper manufacturer and former member of the Federal Price Control Board.

Hoover argued that to downgrade the heads of the fighting arms would diminish their effectiveness, weaken the civilian control over the three services, and make it difficult to find high-caliber men for the jobs.

Early in the study a majority of the commission tentatively agreed that the service secretaries should be reduced in rank; that they should be made directly responsible to the Secretary of Defense and cut off from appeal to the President and Congress.

Then opinion veered. Members of Congress who sit on the Hoover Commission said it was unlikely that Congress would approve such a sweeping decision. But in the final nose-count, the congressional members—Senator McClellan (D., Ark.), Representative Clarence J. Brown (R., Ohio), and Senator Aiken (R., Vt.)—voted for the demotion.

LIANA KREMEZI,

the beautiful resistance trooper who became known as "The Maid of Athens," won $42,000 from a British naval officer in London yesterday in a breach of promise suit. After the verdict ruled against Lieut. Comdr. Thomas G. Ridgeway, she relented and accepted his offer of $8800 in full settlement. The jury and audience cheered. Ridgeway admitted he promised to wed Liana, but changed his mind "because I met another"

Woman Protests Dismissal by Army in Suit

Miss Grace L. Patton, 32, of Charlotte, N. C., filed suit yesterday protesting the procedure under which the Army dismissed her as a civilian employe for "security" reasons.

The District Court complaint requests an injunction against the Army's action.

Miss Patton states that she is a patriotic citizen and has no interest in communism. But, according to the suit, she was charged with attending meetings closely connected with the Communist Party. Through her attorney, Ford E. Young, jr., she stated that the charges against her were incomplete and hampered her defense.

Mundt Urges Business Parley To Fight for Free Enterprise

Private enterprise, whose growth paralleled that of political freedom, has been progressively circumscribed by politicians since 1932, Senator Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.) said yesterday.

When nationalization and "strangulation by regulation" began their attack on private enterprise, Mundt said the English-speaking countries of the world enjoyed more individual freedoms than any others because they had the longest history of free enterprise.

He told the members of the American Conference on Small Business Organizations, in session at the Wardman Park Hotel, to return home and preach the virtues of our economic system so that this country can remain "a bastion of freedom."

The conference concluded its discussion of resolutions proposed during the three-day meeting. The resolutions will be announced today and will be submitted to the proper Senate and House committees during a visit to Congress by members of the conference.

Veteran House Clerk Ousted Over Protests

A Buffalo, N. Y., carpenter was sworn in yesterday as disbursing clerk of the House to replace the 16-year incumbent, evoking vigorous protests from Republican leaders.

The appointment of Harry M. Livingston had been opposed also by Ralph R. Roberts, clerk of the House of Representatives. Roberts, who contended he was responsible for the hiring of his staff, was overruled Saturday by Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) after two conferences.

Evicted by this action from the job was J. C. Shanks.

Protest by Martin

Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.), former Speaker, castigated the majority organization for its abrupt firing of the veteran disbursing clerk.

"It just goes to show you how far they are going in their hunger for patronage," he declared. "It was extremely petty to remove a man who had been efficient in his job for so many years."

Shanks was termed "a great public servant" by the Massachusetts Republican.

Representative John Taber (R., N. Y.) asserted Shanks "apparently was fired under the supposition that all employes must be totally incompetent."

The dismissed employe "has done a very good job in that important position," Representative Taber said. "He always had accounts correct and always knew what he was talking about when called on for information."

Roberts Silent

Roberts refused to comment on the charge.

"The appointment has been made," he said, "and as far as I am concerned, Mr. Livingston will be a good clerk."

The disbursing clerk pays the 2500 House officers and employes. The monthly payroll averages about $800,000, but total disbursements from the office run more than a million dollars a month.

Livingston will draw a salary of $5600 to begin. Shanks' annual renumeration was $9984.

Livingston is Democratic chairman of the Twenty-fourth Ward in Buffalo. He was a civil service carpenter there in the division of recreation and city parks development.

House Passage Predicted for Pension Bill

By The Associated Press

Republican Leader Martin (Mass.) predicted yesterday that the House will pass the Rankin veterans' pension despite warnings from the bill's critics that it would impose a "staggering" financial burden on the Nation.

He gave that opinion to newsmen as Administration forces abandoned the idea of trying to keep the measure from coming up for consideration.

Although the minority leader had said earlier that the pension bill will not be made a party matter, he added that the Republican Policy Committee probably will consider it next Tuesday along with other subjects.

The bill is sponsored by Representative Rankin (D., Miss.).

House leaders switched tactics to let the pension proposal come up, in the belief it will be scuttled under a flood of crippling amendments.

If the remodeling job pleases no one and the bill is voted down, they figure this will settle the pension question at this session of Congress at least. If not, they figure they can count on the Senate as a backstop.

Meanwhile, the bill was slated for clearance by the House Rules Committee next week under procedure allowing the Speaker to put it on the calendar.

Frowned on by President Truman, the pension proposal would pay $90 a month to all 18,800,000 World War I and II veterans when they reach 65. Its cost has been estimated to range from 62 million dollars the first year to six billion dollars by 1990.

In a statement to Congress yesterday in which they opposed the measure, officials of the American Veterans Committee placed its over-all cost of 150 billion dollars.

This "staggering burden," the AVC said in a brief to the Rules Committee, "will be extracted in large part in the coming years from pockets of veterans and their families."

In a letter to Chairman Sabath (D., Ill.) of the House Rules Committee, AVC National Commander Gilbert A. Harrison wrote that the provisions of the bill are of a "dangerous character."

AVC says what it wants is better housing and employment opportunities, reasonable minimum wages, national defense, old-age benefits under broadened social security, and care of ill and disabled veterans.

Senate Backing Seems Sure for Commerce Aide

By The Associated Press

Thomas C. Blaisdell, jr., seemed assured yesterday of Senate confirmation as Assistant Secretary of Commerce. A Senate committee excused him after 12 minutes of casual questioning.

The Senators did not raise the issue of Blaisdell's outspoken support for his aide, William W. Remington. Remington was accused by Elizabeth Bentley last summer of passing secret information to a wartime Soviet spy ring. He was suspended from his job, but was cleared by a loyalty board last week and reinstated.

The Senate Commerce Subcommittee headed by Senator Johnson (D., Colo.) lacked a quorum. It therefore could not vote yesterday on a recommendation for Blaisdell's confirmation, Johnson explained.

There was no sign of criticism in the questions asked the Pittsburgh-born official. He has been acting as Assistant Secretary for Foreign and Domestic Commerce since last May.

Ross, Truman Aide, Undergoes Operation

Charles C. Ross, press secretary to President Truman, underwent an operation at Walter Reed Hospital yesterday.

Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, the President's physician, performed the surgery on Ross' right forearm. There was no announcement as to the ailment, but it is understood to involve a bone and tendons.

Truman Flies March 6 For Florida Vacation

President Truman will fly to Key West, Fla., March 6 for a two-week vacation, the White House announced yesterday. It also said that while in Florida Mr. Truman will go to Winter Park March 8 to receive an honorary degree from Rollins College. He will speak briefly and informally.

The tentative schedule for the flight from Washington to Key West calls for a takeoff at 8:30 a. m. March 6.

The talk will be given before the Applied Mechanics and Machine Design Division of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, but the meeting is open to the public.

Check Passer Fined $200

Mrs. Katherine B. James, 32, a former WAC officer of Pine Top, N. C., was sentenced yesterday to pay a $200 fine or serve 120 days in jail. According to Municipal Court charges she passed a bad check and failed to pay bills at several hotels here.

America Is Losing Cold War, Wallace Tells House Group

By The Associated Press

Henry A. Wallace said yesterday he believes the United States is losing the "cold war" and should bargain with Russia for peace.

The former Vice President said Communism is no threat to world peace right now. But, he called the Marshall Plan and the projected North Atlantic defense alliance a "mad course" leading this country and western Europe toward bankruptcy and a fighting war.

There were momentary flashes of temper in rapid-fire questions and answers as Wallace testified before the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

At one point, Representative Ribicoff (D., Conn.) declared:

"Mr. Wallace's statement here today has done more than anything else to rally the United States behind the European recovery program."

Representative Jackson (R., Calif.) refused to ask the former Commerce Secretary a question, but he said:

"If this committee desires to use itself as a sounding board for apologies to the greatest aggression since Kubla Khan, that's its prerorgative. But I don't propose to be the strings of the piano, nor the keys, nor the pedals."

Wallace told Chairman Bloom (D., N. Y.) once that Bloom was using mere words in talking about the relationship of the ERP to the United Nations.

Bloom barked: "That's all we've here today then—words."

Wallace flushed but kept silent.

The committee and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee are considering authorization of $5,580,000,000 to keep the Marshall Plan going another 15 months after April 1.

The Senators already have completed their hearings. Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) said the measure may be reported out this week with "some technical amendments."

Ahead of a meeting of the committee yesterday, Senator George (D., Ga.) raised the question as to whether the ERP funds should be cut to help meet the cost of rearming western Europe under the proposed North Atlantic alliance.

It is generally believed the Administration will ask Congress for at least one billion dollars to help the pact-making nations rearm.

"In view of this," George said, "we ought to know what the total outlay will be. It might be well to cut the economic expenditures to help pay for arms."

Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) previously had suggested a three-billion-dollar cut, with part of the savings to be used for arms.

In his testimony, Wallace predicted the defense pact "will irrevocably commit us to a two-world policy of conflict." He said the lend-lease provision of the plan may cost 20 billion to 30 billion dollars.

He said this and the Marshall Plan are moves which "will seriously undermine and weaken our national security. . . . They invite a war which no nation can win and in which humanity will be the victim." Terming them "aggressive gestures against the Soviet Union," Wallace said they "inevitably will provoke heavy countermeasures."

Representative Lodge (R., Conn.) asked Wallace if he thought the United States is winning its "cold war" against communism.

"No," Wallace replied, "I think the whole world, including the United States and Russia, are losing it."

When Lodge insisted on a direct answer as to this Nation, Wallace said: "I think we are losing it."

The former Cabinet officer said that his position "has nothing to do with the Communist attitude." And, he added, "I think it's really Russia, more than communism," against which American policy is aimed.

U. N. Study on Size Of Armies Ordered

Lake Success, Feb. 23 (AP).—The United Nations Committee for Conventional Armaments ordered its working committee today to study plans for collecting information on the armed strength of U. N. members. Russia charged this was a spying move by Western powers.

The commission voted 9 to 2 for its working committee, made up of the same 11 members as the commission, to get going on the preliminaries. Thus it passed on to the working committee the assignment decided upon by the General Assembly in Paris last year.

Russia and the Soviet Ukraine voted against the other nine members. Jakos A. Malik, Russian Deputy Foreign Minister, contended the United States and Britain were pushing the plan in order to gather information for their intelligence services.

No one answered the Russian before the vote. But afterward Frederick H. Osborn, United States, said Malik's long speech against the United States and Britain had been made at least twice before.

Off the floor, Osborn told a reporter he saw no reason to answer the charges again and rested on his earlier denial to the whole attack.

Malik and Vassily A. Tarasenko, Soviet Ukraine, said if the commission was going to gather information on arms it should get full information on everything, including atomic weapons.

The commission majority decided months ago that the commission should not discuss atomic energy.

American Girl Detained by Reds

Vienna, Feb. 23 (AP).—Two American girls, visiting in Vienna, figure in an incident with the Russians that is under investigation by the United States provost marshal's office today.

The marshal's office said the girls were detained by Russian soldiers two hours yesterday after they photographed a picture of Prime Minister Stalin on the Russian Kommandatura Building.

The girls were identified as Carol C. Hacket, 21, Berkeley, Calif., and Constance A. Cole, 23, Watertown, N. Y. They are Military Government employes in Nuernberg, Germany.

Miss Hacket said two Russian soldiers seized her by the arm and pulled her about 10 yards. Their treatment after the arrest was described as "quite good." The girls said they were taken to the Soviet headquarters and questioned, but were not jailed. They reported they were asked to sign statements in Russian and English, and that three rolls of film were confiscated.

2 in Spy Trial Accused as in Pay of Poland

Munich, Germany, Feb. 23 (AP).—The prosecution introduced evidence before a United States military commission today that two espionage defendants had made out receipts for payments from "the Polish Secret Service."

The two are among five Europeans on trial before the commission on charges of obtaining United States military information for a foreign power. The foreign power was not identified.

Other documents which the prosecution tried to link with the defendants described industrial establishments and United States Air Force facilities in the American zone of Germany.

Defense attorneys, appointed by the government, say they will contend that no crime was committed unless it can be shown that the "foreign power" for which the five allegedly worked is a menace to the United States.

Thorez Quiz Demanded

Paris, Feb. 23 (NYHT)—Maurice Thorez, the French Communist leader, is to be asked to tell the National Assembly Thursday if his indorsement of non-resistance to the Red army means he thinks war is inevitable, and that France should prepare to receive "a new occupant with open arms."

In a statement yesterday Thorez said the Soviet Union never had and never would go to war except as a liberating force. If the Red army came to France, he went on, it would be coming to rescue the French territory for socialism, and against Anglo-Saxon imperialism. The French people, therefore, would welcome Soviet troops as they had been greeted in eastern Europe.

The Assembly's foreign committee voted 21 to 13 to have Premier Henri Queuille demand a hearing on the matter "without delay."

Reds Boast Of 'Superior New Arms'

Moscow, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—Marshal Leonid A. Govorov asserted today that the Soviet army possesses "new arms much superior to the best foreign models." He gave no details.

Govorov, who drove the Germans back at Leningrad in one of the great campaigns of the war, made his statement in an article in the newspaper Izvestia on Army Day, celebrating the thirty-first anniversary of the Red Army.

He bitterly attacked the United States, saying American imperialists are following in the tracks of the Germans.

"They are trying to scare nations with (the possibility of) blitzkrieg blows by means of atomic bombs," Govorov said.

"By means of military and atomic diplomacy they try to undermine the self-confidence of peace-loving peoples. But peace-loving nations are confident of themselves and confident of the might of the great Soviet Union, standing at the head of the democratic anti-imperialist camp."

West Berlin Commanders Scorn Red Army Party

Berlin, Feb. 23 (AP).—Western military commanders extended their diplomatic deep freeze treatment tonight to a big Red Army Day party in this focal point of East-West differences.

The celebrations commemorated the thirty-first anniversary of the founding of the Soviet armed forces.

Soviet Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky extended invitations for the Berlin party to the American, British and French commanders in Germany.

None accepted personally. Instead, they assigned the heads of the three military missions stationed at Soviet headquarters in Karlshorst to go to the party as their sole representatives.

Hundreds of Soviet troops, many looking no older than 16, marched in relays through the Brandenburg Gate in Berlin to the stone and marble Soviet war memorial just inside the British sector to place flowers on the memorial. The Yugoslav military mission placed a wreath, although relations between the Kremlin and Premier Marshal Tito remain cool.

Cruiser En Route Home After Loan to Russia

Portsmouth, England, Feb. 23 (AP).—The cruiser Milwaukee, 7000-ton American warship lent to Russia in 1944, put in here for fuel today en route back to the United States.

The Italian peace treaty specified her return was to coincide with delivery to Russia of the 7000-ton Italian cruiser Duca D'Aosta, one of the vessels now being sent to Soviet ports by Italy.

German-Labor Import Plan Stirs Prague Political Crisis

London, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—A Russian plan to send thousands of German workmen into Czechoslovakia has touched off a political crisis in Prague on the first anniversary of the Communist coup, well-informed quarters reported today.

President Klement Gottwald reportedly resisted the scheme, while Premier Antonin Zapotocky was ready to accept it. Zapotocky "disappeared" for several days, it was reported here, but last night spoke on the Prague radio with these words:

"No doubt you heard a lot about me in the last few days. Some people already thought I was buried. But I am still alive."

Some sources here believed that the reported Gottwald-Zapotocky split was the real reason Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky turned up in Carlsbad recently for a "water cure" and "rest."

Gottwald, who became President after the Communist coup, represents the more nationalist element of the Prague administration. Zapotocky, former boss of Czech trade unions, is said to favor closer cooperation with Russia and the neighboring satellites.

The Russian proposal to transfer Germans to Czechoslovakia reportedly was submitted some time ago. It was understood that Moscow wanted to settle from 200,000 to 400,000 Germans in the Sudetenland—the Czech frontier area touching Germany.

14 Indicted As Mindszenty Collaborators

Budapest, Feb. 23 (AP).—Hungary indicted 14 persons today on charges that they speculated in foreign currency on behalf of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty.

A people's court recently convicted Cardinal Mindszenty, Roman Catholic Primate of Hungary, whom the (Communist) government accused of treason, espionage and black market dealings in currency.

The foreign office again assailed Selden B. Chapin, United States minister. Chapin is en route to the United States, following a Hungarian demand for his recall on charges that he encouraged Cardinal Mindszenty in spy activities. In Paris, Chapin described those accusations as "fabricated lies, beneath contempt."

The government announced two more opposition parties have "adopted unanimously the program of the Hungarian Independent People's Front." It identified them as the Democratic Party, headed by the Rev. Istvan Balogh, and the Radical Union. Father Balogh is a Roman Catholic priest.

U. S. Mindszenty Stand Applauded by Chapin

New York, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—Selden Chapin, United States minister recalled from Hungary, said today that official United States reaction to the trial of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty had a "profound and beneficial effect" on Europeans behind the iron curtain.

Chapin was interviewed by radio-telephone over Station WOR. He is aboard the liner Queen Mary, en route to New York.

"In my opinion, the strong, humanitarian statements by President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson had a profound and beneficial effect behind the iron curtain and elsewhere," Chapin said.

apparently referred to a treaty article which Bulgaria guaranteed religious and other freedom to all peoples under her jurisdiction.

The answer on the request for permission for American observers to attend the trial is still awaited. Britain has been granted such permission. Hungary barred foreign observers at the trial of Cardinal Mindszenty.

(The American board of commissioners for foreign missions declared in a statement issued in Boston that the arrest of the 15 Bulgarians was part of a policy of "ruthless suppression of religious groups which are not wholly subservient to the state." (The board, which started protestantism in Bulgaria in 1858, said the Bulgarian government seems to be carrying out a policy of denying religious freedom. It urged that "all Christian people pray for the people of Bulgaria.")

AP Correspondent Held 6 Hours by Russians

Vienna, Feb. 23 (AP).—An Associated Press correspondent bound for the clergy trial in Bulgaria was detained by the Russians for six hours today and prevented from making his deadline at Sofia.

The correspondent, Richard Kasischke, was bound from Vienna to Sofia. He was taken off the train by Russian guards at the border between the British and Russian zones of Austria and ordered to carry his baggage two miles to a Russian headquarters and there detained for six hours.

Finn Cabinet Is Upheld by 97-to-95 Vote

Helsinki, Finland, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—Premier Karl August Fagerholm's Social Democratic government squeezed through by a 2-vote margin today after demanding a vote of confidence from the Parliament on its domestic policies.

The 97-95 vote was the closest in the government's seven-month history. It came after a 28-hour debate in which the Agrarian party and the Communists combined forces in a bitter attack on the government's farm policies.

Previously, the Parliament defeated, by a tie vote, a Conservative Party motion that the government stay in office and intensify efforts to solve the economic problems of farmers.

The Agrarians have been increasingly critical of the government's welfare plans because they said they favored the laboring class rather than the farmers, and today the Communists united with them in an effort to oust the Fagerholm government.

Israel, Egypt Sign Armistice

only points where the Jews surrender territory or strategic points won in their October and December offensives in the southern desert of Palestine.

They will be permitted to maintain outposts of platoon strength in the southern Negev desert and maintain "defensive" strength in 25 Israeli settlements which already dot the Negev.

The Egyptians will retain the Gaza coastal strip but will withdraw several miles from the Sinai frontier with an outpost at Abu Awugeils. The Egyptians also will evacuate Beit Hanun, which is north of Gaza and which will be demilitarized.

On the "eastern front" the Jews will maintain their present forces until the armistice with Trans-Jordan is completed.

Egyptian troops cut off from Gaza and under command of the Arab Legion in and south of Jerusalem will remain in their present positions until the Israeli-Trans-Jordan armistice is signed.

The crack Egyptian brigade which has been trapped at Faluja in southern Palestine since October will be permitted to start moving out over a specified highway at 5 a. m. Saturday. Israeli troops will not be permitted along the route of withdrawal.

One of the most significant parts of the agreement is concession by the Egyptians that the October 14 lines in the Negev would not serve the "basic purposes and spirit" of the armistice.

These were the lines before Israel launched its October offensive in the Negev. At the outset of the armistice talks the Egyptians had insisted they withdraw to the original lines before the fighting which ended with Egypt on the losing end.

The armistice calls for the demilitarization of all Egyptian-held Palestine.

Reds Reported Preparing to Cross Yangtze

Nanking, Feb. 23 (AP).—The governor of the province which embraces Nanking and Shanghai said today the Communists appear to be busy preparing for a crossing of the Yangtze.

Gen. Ting Chi-pan, governor of Kiangsu Province, told reporters the Communists have 20,000 regulars on the north bank opposite Chinkiang, 40 miles east of Nanking.

Acting President Li Tsung-jen has warned the Communists all peace talks are off if they cross the Yangtze.

The accent still was on peace, however, as leaders awaited the return of Li from south China for top-level conferences.

Ting confirmed previous reports that Li Ming-yang, described in the Chinese press as the acting President's peace emissary, is in Communist-held Hwaiying, 115 miles north of Nanking.

Nanking Government Dickers With Russia

Nanking, Feb. 23. (U.P.).—China is negotiating with the Soviet Union for establishment of joint Chinese-Soviet commercial and mining corporations in the northwest China province of Sinkiang, it was disclosed today.

Gen. Chang Chi-Chung, commander of northwest China, said the negotiations cover both economic cooperation and a trade agreement. The proposed economic cooperation agreement, he said, would provide for commercial and mining corporations with 51 per cent Chinese and 49 per cent Soviet capital.

Chang said the agreements would not contain any specific provisions giving Russia exclusive economic rights in Sinkiang.

Peron May Call for Labor Demonstration

Buenos Aires, Feb. 23 (AP).—President Juan D. Peron threatened today to call his labor class supporters into the streets to battle a whispering campaign he said his foes have started against him.

In a fighting speech to the Railway Workers Union, Peron said his foes were resorting to an "irregular warfare of rumors like a bunch of gossiping old maids" because they feared openly to oppose his regime.

The speech, delivered last night, was not made available until today.

Peron recalled past mass demonstrations of workers in support of his regime and implied he might have to call them out again "within a few days."

He made no direct reference to repeated rumors that the army had turned against him. He denied them in a speech last Friday. War Minister Jose Humberto Sosa Molina has called such reports "an insult to the army."

A wave of rumors has swept Buenos Aires the past 16 days, chiefly due to the lack of daily newspapers. They have ceased publication due to a printers' strike.

U. S. Writer, Expelled by Reds, En Route to N. Y.

Gander, Newfoundland, Feb. 23 (AP).—Anna Louise Strong, the American newspaperwoman deported from Russia on spy charges arrived at Gander tonight en route to New York by plane from Paris.

"I have no comment to make until I digest . . . all the comment on me both by Moscow and America," Miss Strong told newsmen.

(In Washington, the Justice Department said that when Miss Strong arrives in this country, she will be subject to "routine examination" by Immigration Service officials at the port of entry.

(The examination, the department said, will be for the purpose of establishing that she did not engage in any activity abroad which would bar her free entry into the United States as an American citizen.)

Border Threat

Siam Orders Emergency In Red War

Bangkok, Siam, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—Premier Phibun Songgram's government proclaimed a state of emergency tonight to cope with Communist pressure on Siam's borders, and mounting unrest inside the country.

Songgram signed the decree six days after the cabinet decided to declare a state of emergency and close the border with Malaya. The proclamation had to await approval of the council of regents, acting for young King Phumiphon Aduldet.

The Premier said th eproclamation was deemed necessary because of Communist activities in Malaya, Burma, French Indo-China and China.

He added that disorders already had spread so rapidly inside Siam that the government had been compelled to use force to suppress the unrest.

Czechs Here Organize for Red Rule Fight

By The Associated Press

Exiled Czech leaders have completed forming a council of free Czechoslovakians to rally opposition to Communist domination of their homeland.

After weeks of negotiation, a formal announcement is expected shortly. The organization is designed to serve some of the purposes of a government in exile.

Its sponsors held top posts in the Czech government until the Communists took over last year. They worked out details at a series of meetings here, arranged by Dr. Peter Zenkl, former Mayor of Prague.

Many came from Britain and France for the purpose, with State Department sanction.

Michael Hanak, a former Czech Foreign Office official who is secretary of the group, said that one of its major objectives will be to help care for thousands of Czech refugees.

He said the council might form the nucleus of a restored democratic regime should the Communist tide recede. A similar World War I organization with headquarters in the United States furnished leaders for the independent Czechoslovakia that emerged after that conflict.

A full-fledged government in exile like the World War II London regime is ruled out for the time being. This time the United States, British, and the other Western governments have continued formal relations with Czechoslovakia despite the Communist seizure of power.

Leaders of all that Nation's major non-Communist parties have taken part in the negotiations here.

Acheson Will Brief Congressmen on China

By the United Press

Republican members of the House who are worried about the State Department's hands-off policy in China are scheduled to get a briefing today from Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

Some 51 Republicans recently demanded an official Administration statement on China. Acheson was supposed to deliver it at a closed meeting yesterday but postponed his appearance because of a cold.

Navy Helicopter Pilot Dies in Greenland Ice

The Navy reported yesterday that Lieut. Richard Leo Wiskirchen of Chicago, Ill., was killed Monday when a helicopter he was piloting crashed in Greenland.

The Navy said a brief message received here did not give details but apparently the helicopter crashed through ice at a pier at Narsarssuak, Greenland. The accident occurred at night shortly after the craft took off from the icebreaker Edisto. Wirkirchen's body was recovered.

French Move to Restore Ex-Emperor in Indo-China

Paris, Feb. 23 (AP).—France dusted off the crown of Annam today and got ready to put former Emperor Bao Dai on his throne in Indo-China.

France hopes independence-seeking Nationalists will rally around Bao Dai and stop their armed resistance to French troops.

The 3-year war has involved 120,000 French troops and cost France heavily in money and lives. It has cost heavily on the economic side also, slashing Indo-China's exports of iron, tungsten, zinc, tin, manganese, rice, rubber and hides. Indo-China has a population of 25 million.

The cabinet today approved a plan for the Emperor's return. This will be submitted to the lower house of the National Assembly for approval March 11.

Although an official silence was kept on terms of the project, it is known to include a great degree of autonomy for the Bao Dai regime at his insistence.

Nationalists led by Moscow trained Ho Chi Minh, however, are not expected to accept Bao Dai without force. They have already called him a traitor for negotiating with the French.

Viet-Nam Guerillas Try to Blast Bridge

Saigon, Indochina, Feb. 23 (AP).—Two heavy explosions rocked Saigon last night. Officials said nationalist Viet-Nam guerillas tried to blow up a bridge near the center of the city.

Woman Found Slain Near Lovers' Lane

New Castle, Ind., Feb. 23 (U.P.).—The battered body of an attractive woman was found in a cornfield today, near a pool of blood in a lovers' lane.

Hours later, no one in this small industrial city had identified the woman.

pon hearing the news of Pearl Harbor.

"I was in the studio (German roadcasting company at Berlin here she said she had been mis-rees of ceremonies on nonpolitical al programs) when the news came hrough," Miss Gillars related.

"Well, I told them what I hought of Japan, expresed in a ery violent way.

"The shock was terrific. I lost ll discretion and I went back to ny apartment."

Miss Gillars continued: "I was not allowed to work that evening. I got a phone call from Mr. Christiani (radio colleague slated to testify in Miss Gillars' behalf later) telling me not to come to work. 'You'd better stay in bed,' he told me."

Called Before Superior

Later, the defendant related, Christiani again called and told her she'd have to go to the office of Johannes Schmidt-Hansen, her superior at the station.

She said she went to Schmidt-Hansen's office and: "When I came into the room he stared at me from across the table."

He told me he'd heard about my remarks of the preceding day and hoped I'd understood the seriousness of the situation and that I couldn't resume work before I signed a written oath of allegiance to Germany.

"I was profoundly shocked by the whole situation," Miss Gillars continued evenly, "that my conversation with Mr. Schmidt-Hansen was not long . . . I could see the hardness in his flinty eyes . . . at that moment it was best to leave."

"One Has to Live"

The witness said she went to see a male friend and that the latter typed a note in German.

"What did the note say?" inquired Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin.

"Translated, it was to the effect that I swear allegiance to Germany."

"Why did you sign it?" Laughlin asked.

"It is obvious one has to live somehow," Miss Gillars replied with a half smile.

"I signed it in order to live . . . up to that time I had broadcast no propaganda."

The witness then said she took the signed oath to Schmidt-Hansen the following day, December 9, 1941.

Passport Taken Away

After questioning as to her early work on the German radio, during which Miss Gillars vigorously denied participating in any political or propaganda broadcasts, Laughlin asked:

"Did anything happen to your American passport?"

"In 1941 it was taken away from me."

"By whom?"

"By Vice Consul Vaughn in Berlin."

Miss Gillars asserted she had made an appointment with the vice consul in the spring of 1941 to get her passport renewed. She said she told the official's secretary that she worked for the German radio and that "I saw nothing wrong in that."

"The next thing I knew," Miss Gillars testified, "when I went to see Vaughn and told him I wanted my passport renewed and handed it to him, he just snatched it so violently, I knew something was wrong.

The passport just disappeared into his drawer. He said 'I'll give you a receipt for this passport.'"

Miss Gillars said he gave her a receipt but that "I don't recall if he gave any reasons for taking the passport."

At another point Miss Gillars dramatically told how her alleged lack of identification brought her within the grasp of the Gestapo.

"Hollywood" Incidents Related

The story was replete with incidents common to a Hollywood spy picture and dead silence gripped the courtroom as the defendant began:

"I was caught in a subway by the Gestapo one night. I was about to board a train when I noticed my food tickets were missing. I was quite panicky about that and hoped I'd left them in a coffee shop where I ate.

"I went into a phone booth, called the shop. While I was talking I noticed people gathering around the booth. While the shopkeeper was telling me she'd found the tickets, I noticed the crowd getting larger—more and more faces appeared.

"Grabbed" by Gestapo

"I heard a man say 'you can tell by her accent, she's an American.' A man opened the booth door and grabbed my arm. 'I'm from the Gestapo,' he said, 'come with me.'

"I told him 'you can't do this to me. I'm with the radio company.' And I showed him my radio identification card.

"He answered 'that's not enough, come along.'

"I told him I had to call the radio station—that if I didn't show up for the broadcast—that would be sabotage.

Tossing back her long, carefully curled silver hair, the defendant described how she called the radio station, arguing all the while with the Gestapo agent.

Aided by Stranger

She said Schmidt-Hansen engaged the agent in a telephone conversation, while she, receiving a signal from a stranger in the crowd, slipped away from the booth.

The strange but obliging man "grabbed my wrist and pushed me into an approaching train before the Gestapo agent noticed."

She described how with "heart thumping", she returned to the radio station, how the agent followed her there and now after an interview with her superiors he apologized saying "sneeringly as he left: 'Well, 10 times out of 11 you're wrong but the eleventh time you're right.'"

This episode, the witness declared, occurred in the fall of 1942.

Loved U. S., She Says

At one point after Mis Gillars testified she thought she could not return to the United States because her passport had been taken up, Laughlin asked whether she had "Ever said or done anything to hurt the United States" before Pearl Harbor.

"Certainly not," she replied.

"Could it be said that you loved the United States," Laughlin asked softly.

Miss Gillars lifted her chin. "That is quite beyond a question of doubt," she stated. "Anyone who knows me can testify to that."

At the beginning of her 4½-hour testimony, Miss Gillars told the story of a small town (Portland, Me.), stage-struck girl.

From her testimony it appeared that there was often a male friend to lend encouragement or aid, from college professors who helped her in dramatic work, to a restaurateur who gave her a job in New York when she was up against it.

"Knew Nothing of Father"

"I knew nothing about my father except his name, and I'm not aware of his birthplace," she said poignantly after testifying that her mother was born in New Brunswick, Canada.

(Her father's name was Vincent Sisk but Miss Gillars adopted the name of her stepfather after her mother remarried following a divorce.)

"I was taken from one school after another" she said, adding that she attended schools in St. Johns, New Brunswick, Halifax, Canada, Pittsburgh and Conneaut, Ohio.

After graduating from high school in 1917, she testified she entered Ohio Wesleyan University to study English literature and dramatics, the latter course under a Prof. Charles M. Newcomb.

The professor, she said, encouraged her to continue with dramatics and arranged for her to attend a special school in Cleveland from which students were chosen to appear with a professional stock company.

Riding over parental objections, Miss Gillars testified she left home for Cleveland "with $20 in my pocket."

She met Professor Newcomb in that city, she said, he having resigned from the faculty and he helped her get a job selling costore jewelry in a department store for $15 weekly, while she attended dramatic school at night.

After paying a $10 weekly fee to the school, she testified "I just about gave up eating. I existed on apples and crackers for months."

She testified the school cut the tuition $5 after she fainted one night and explained her plight.

She said commissions also were paid in the store but that only by selling an "astronomical amount" could they total a fair sum.

On one week, she declared, her commissions amounted to $89 and that the store owner called her in, told her she had set a record and suggested she could have a career as a buyer.

"I told him I'd use the $89 to further my dramatic career," the defendant declared.

Store Owner "Was Jewish"

Laughlin inquired as to the nationality of the store owner.

"He was Jewish," Miss Gillars said.

Miss Gillars testified she went to New York and achieved a part with a road show playing "Little Lord Fauntleroy." It was a series of one-night stand throughout Canada, she said.

Later, she said, she was cast in a straight dramatic role in a New York musical comedy, "My Girl."

"But I thought I was getting nowhere playing the innocuous role I had and I told the manager I was unhappy. I didn't think my dramatic career was being helped by that sort of role. After that it was the same old story again. Day after day going from agent to agent hearing the same story, 'Nothing today.'

"After I had no food for eight days I knew I could go to the agents no longer. My face was too tired and haggard."

Typed Menus for Meals

Then it was, she related that the proprietor of "Old Heidelberg" a New York restaurant gave her a job typing menus in return for meals.

She told how she returned to the "My Girl" cast and later drifted into vaudeville.

"I was always torn between a need for funds and a desire to do something for the American theater," she said.

Despite her lack of funds, Miss Gillars managed to visit Paris in 1929, and, she testified, took off for Africa in 1933.

Referring to her reunion with her mother in Budapest, Miss Gillars said:

"I told mother that it had been an age-old dream of mine to study in Germany. I was too depressed at that time about conditions in America. I loved New York, but I felt my future could not advance there."

Stranded in Europe without the funds promised by her mother, the defendant managed to eat, she said, by going "to the pawnbroker with my jewelry."

Got Job Teaching English

She said that in 1935 she met Mrs. Hooper Trask, widow of a Berlin correspondent for the New York Times.

Mrs. Trask provided her with a home, she said, and shortly afterward she got a job teaching English at the Berlitz School in Berlin.

The woman in charge of the Berlitz school appeared unfriendly, Miss Gillars said, but "certain men in the institution intervened in my behalf and she gave me a contract."

Mrs. Trask returned to the United States in 1939, Miss Gillars said, and she had no further contact with her.

The witness then described how she got a job with "Bremen Sender" a European broadcast under direction of the German radio system in May, 1940.

She said she started as an announcer and "I never said a propagandistic word the whole time. Later she said she became a mistress of ceremonies for entertainment programs, working in that capacity "up to 1943 when I had to leave."

Miss Gillars will resume the stand today. The proceedings will begin at 10 a. m.

Chrysler Corporation Raises Prices

Detroit, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—Chrysler Corp. announced today a 6.7 per cent increase in the prices of 1949 Plymouth, Dodge, De Soto and Chrysler cars, as compared with 1948 prices.

The new price schedules also cover the "small" Plymouths and Dodges, newly introduced into the corporation's line of cars. The factory retail price for the small Plymouth, without taxes or extra equipment, was listed at $1295, compared with 1272 for the 1948 model three-pasenger coupe.

Comparable factory prices on "top-line" four-door sedans for the four cars for 1948 and 1949, respectively, were:

Plymouth, $1447 and $1540; Dodge, $1694 and $1825; De Soto, $1793 and $2059, and Chrysler, $2286 and $2883.

said, "that the issuance of permits for any activity on all unassigned Federal park areas be administered on a 'first come, first served' basis, without regard to race, creed, color or national origin."

Asked by a reporter for The Washington Post if Krug's statement will affect two swimming pools, the Anacostia and the Francis, located at two of the areas, an Interior Department spokesman said that they already are operated on a nonsegregated basis.

The Anacostia generally is considered as a white pool and the Francis a pool for Negroes. They are run by Government Services, Inc.

An Old Controversy

Krug's letter was the latest development in a running controversy between the Interior Department's policy of biracial use of play areas, or the Recreation Department's segregated program shall prevail.

A dispute over which of the two agencies controls 62 playgrounds purchased by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission with funds borrowed by the District from the Federal Government is now before Attorney General Tom Clark for settlement.

Krug's letter said that none of these areas is involved in the present order. The Interior Department is awaiting the Attorney General's opinion before taking any action on the 62 tracts, Krug said.

Krug to Wender

He did point out to Wender, though, that the Interior Department considers these recreation centers are on Federal park land and that the Recreation Department acts only "as the agent for the Department of the Interior in the issuance of permits."

The Interior Department said that the play areas involved were owned by the Federal Government before the National Capital Park and Planning Commission came into being.

Wender was annoyed when asked for comment on Krug's letter. He said that he had not yet received it.

"It is another instance when the recreation board can only learn of Interior Department action through the press," Wender declared.

Wender cited two previous instances: When the Interior Department called on the Attorney General to rule that it has jurisdiction over the 62 playgrounds; and Interior's refusal to give the Recreation Department information on its operation of local golf courses.

Milo C. Christiansen, recreation superintendent, said that although racial use of the 18 courts is listed by the Recreation Department on the back of the permits, no effort is made to enforce segregation on Federal land.

He said the Recreation Department is obliged to list by race the five areas mentioned by Krug, since the law setting up the Recreation Department makes it mandatory for the department to follow the recreation plan as outlined by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

In the commission's recreation plan, Anacostia, Garfield Park and Montrose Park are listed as "white units" and Francis as a "colored unit," Christiansen said.

The Interior Department participated as a member of the Park and Planning Commission in setting up the plan, he said.

Red Tag New Lynch Form, Oxnam Says

New York, Feb. 23 (NYHT).—Asserting that certain elements in this country are capitalizing on "contemporary fear" of Communism, Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, head of the New York area of the Methodist Church, said tonight that "this labeling of patriotic citizens as Communist is a new form of lynching."

He called also for civilian control of American foreign policy and rebuked the Roman Catholic Church for denying religious liberty to others while creating "hysteria antecedent to war" when its own liberties are abridged.

Bishop Oxnam spoke at a dinner at the Hotel Astor, where he received the 1949 award of the Churchman, unaffiliated Episcopal magazine, for his "promotion of good will and better understanding among all peoples."

He said he personally rejects communism and everything connected with it but that a proper defense against any totalitarian threat "cannot be met by men whose minds are confused by hysteria and whose hearts are filled with hatred."

"To hear some men talk," he continued, "you would think the Communists were about to take over the Government of this country. These are the people who but yesterday called Franklin Delano Roosevelt a Communist and who insisted that the whole New Deal was conceived in sin and born in iniquity, sired by Stalin out of depression."

Turning to the control of American foreign policy, Bishop Oxnam said that a civilian "thinks in larger terms" than the military man. He said our policy should be determined by "our civilian President, our civilian State Department, our civilian Senate and our civilian House."

"A church that denies religious liberty to others, when it has the power to do so," he said in the third phase of his speech, "is in an embarrassing position when it creates the hysteria antecedent to war when others deny religious liberty to it . . . Religious liberty means freedom for Roman Catholics in Hungary, and also freedom for Protestants in Spain, in Colombia and the Argentine.

"I was unable to support Mr. Wallace in the last campaign . . . but I must say that when priests who cry to High Heaven for religious liberty in Hungary protest his right to speak in Danbury (Conn.) and procure a cancellation of his engagement, they have yet to learn the meaning of religious or civil liberty."

Fleming Names Seward to Head Bureau of FWA

Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming yesterday appointed Pere F. Seward to succeed George H. Field as commissioner of the FWA's Bureau of Community Facilities.

Until his promotion, Seward was deputy commissioner for engineering in the bureau.

His career includes extensive experience in engineering and building, including work with the Maryland and North Carolina State Road Commissions, and director of the projects division in the office of the Federal Works Administrator during World War II. He lives at 8100 Custer rd., Bethesda.

Field resigned recently to join the Dahlman Construction Co., Milwaukee.

Man's Death Laid To Fall Suffered Before His Arrest

A coroner's jury yesterday ruled the death of Bernard Jordan, 45, of 1335 C st. se., accidental, deciding he had suffered a fatal injury in a fall shortly before his arrest February 14 on a drunk charge.

Jordan, after his arrest, collapsed in a cell at the Fourth Precinct station house and was removed to Gallinger Hospital, where he died last Friday.

more where the top limit would be $1500.

The public housing section would permit the construction of 135,000 public housing units a year, although the President with the consent of his Council of Economic Advisers could increase the limit to 150,000 in any one year or lower it to 50,000. Regardless of any annual changes the overall six-year total would remain 810,000.

In the rural housing section the measure generally followed provisions of a bill originally introduced by Sparkman. Farm buildings as well as homes were made eligible for loans. Help for substandard "uneconomic" farms was limited to $1000 for temporary repairs. Farmers who got behind on their payments because of crop failures etc., would be allowed a temporary moratorium.

The bill was emended to permit commercial banks to underwrite public housing bonds. Heretofore such underwriting has been largely limited to investment banks.

Meanwhile on the House side of the Capitol, the Banking and Currency Committee worked overtime in an attempt to speed rent control legislation before the March 31 expiration date.

Representative Walter A. Lynch (D., N. Y.) remarked yesterday that the Federal Housing Expediter's office appears to be trying to solve the housing shortage by advocating birth control. Lynch was protesting a ruling by the expediter's office concerning "normal occupany" of a rented dwelling.

Ban on Race Bar Is Asked

later the schedule was extended to February 23. Executive sessions will get under way, probably beginning Monday. Both Democratic and Republican committee members expressed the hope that a bill would be reported out by Monday, March 7.

Senator Morse disclosed that he, Senator Taft, and Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.) were separately preparing their own labor bills, and would soon meet to see if they could agree on a single measure. If they cannot agree, each will fight for his own legislation on the floor of the Senate, Morse said.

The Administration bill would eliminate the Taft-Hartley Act with its ban on the closed shop and 80-day injunctions against emergency strikes. Instead, the Administration measure would restore the Wagner Act, prohibit jurisdictional strikes and certain secondary boycotts, and seek to block emergency strikes through aroused public opinion.

William Leiserson, a former member of the National Labor Relations Board, yesterday declared that the Taft-Hartley Act was "no good," even though he favored retention of several of the act's provisions. He asserted the Taft-Hartley Act hindered rather than encouraged colle tive bargaining. The Administration bill, he said, was sound "as a whole." He would go further in encouraging mediation and voluntary arbitration of disputes.

Another witness, William J. During, vice president of Precision Casting Co., Fayetteville, N. Y., aserted that Congress will do the Communist Party a valuable service if the lawmakers scrap the anti-Communist affidavit provision of the Taft-Hartley Act.

The Chicago Newspaper Publishers Association, in a statement filed with the committee, yesterday charged that the 15-month-old strike of printers on Chicago papers is "unquestionably a strike against the national policy" as expressed in the Taft-Hartley Act. They disputed the testimony of Woodruff Randolph, president of the International Typographical Union, who had testified that the strike is over wage rates.

Bill Asks More DP Admissions

Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) announced yesterday he will offer a bill to admit 175,000 more displaced Europeans than can come to this country under present law.

Wiley proposed that all persons who entered the Allied occupation zones of Germany and Austria up to January 1, 1949 be eligible for admission. The present law's deadline is December 22, 1945.

Anti-Filibuster Fight Is Set change for even vital Administration measures once debate on the rules change gets going.

As a result, some Northern Democrats last night were talking about cracking down on the filibuster before next week is out. After a few days' debate they may bring in a cloture petition in an effort to shut off debate on the motion to call up the antifilibuster bill.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), while President pro tem, ruled clotures did not apply to a motion to call up a bill. Northern Democrats think Vice President Alben W. Barkley will reverse Vandenberg's ruling if given the chance, so they expect to apply for cloture anyway.

So complex was the tangle that Democrats wrangled about all the complications for two hours and decided only one point—that the rules change should take precedence over reciprocal trade.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) said there was no agreement on when the leadership should move t lay the rules change aside for the trade bill, but if the filibuster is extended he will ask that it be displaced temporarily for that and other "important" bills.

Lucas said he didn't expect much help from Republicans.

"For political reasons, they are more interested in this rules matter than they are in housing, rent control, Federal aid to education, the labor bill or anything else," he said. "They want to put the Democratic Party on the spot on civil rights."

The Senate Republican Policy Committee discussed the matter briefly, then adjourned for lack of a quorum. Chairman Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) ignored Lucas' charge of GOP politicking but voiced doubt that Lucas will be able to sidetrack the rules change for other legislation.

Some Southern Democrats told newsmen privately they, too, would oppose calling up other measures unless the rules change was permanently displaced "because we want to get this thing over—we don't want it dangling over us all session."

Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) called another conference of Southern Democrats today to map filibuster plans.

Said Russell: "It is wholly probable we will be involved in a fight that will bring about delays in legislation on which most Democrats are agreed. It can cause complications that will defeat major pieces of legislation. We regret this. But we did not raise the issue."

Army Band Pays Musical Tribute To Brotherhood

The United States Army Band last night paid musical tribute to Brotherhood Week with representative selections in a program at the Departmental Auditorium, Constitution ave. between 12th and 14th sts. nw.

Protestant, Catholic and Jewish hymns were featured on the program along with musical selections representative of many nationalities. Finale was a medley of tunes from Porgy and Bess.

Guest speaker was Dr. Seth R. Brooks, minister of the Universal National Memorial Church, and Washington chairman of the clergy advisory committee of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Committee Urges Lane Budget Cuts

'Vicious' Letters

GOP Blasts Park 'Ripper' Bill Attack

By Phillip J. Austensen
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 23.—Republican members of the Montgomery County legislative delegation replied tonight to letters from Montgomery Democratic leaders opposing transfer of Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission functions to the county's council.

The GOP reply was made to the General Assembly. The Republicans charged the letters were "the most vicious and misleading ever sent "by any partisan politician to this legislative body."

The letters had been sent by Col. E. Brooke Lee, vice chairman of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and J. Bond Smith, general counsel of the commission and chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee for the county.

Democratic members were urged to aid in defeating "ripper" bills to transfer functions of the planning commission to the Montgomery County Council, while Republican delegates were told the bills represent an attempt by "hybrid Republicans" to impair the two-party system.

Delegates John R. Reeves and R. Duncan Clark issued a joint statement declaring the bills under attack merely return the planning commission to the status it had when it was created in 1927, a park acquisition and administrative body. They charged other functions were added to keep Democratic machine patronage threatened by the advent of charter government.

A public hearing on the bills will be held Friday at 11:30 a. m. by the ways and means committee.

Meanwhile, members of the Prince Georges County delegation announced that a public hearing will be held March 2 at 9 p. m. in the State House on the controversial bill to authorize a referendum for incorporation of Morningside. Delegation Chairman Perry O. Wilkinson urged both sides to attend and speak.

Two other Prince Georges County-sponsored bills passed the House today. One increases the fire tax in Mount Rainier from 10 to 15 cents and the other authorized the town council of Bladensburg to name the town treasurer, heretofore, elected. The Prince Georges delegation introduced a bill providing for a referendum by College Park voters on increasing the town tax rate limit from 25 to 50 cents.

The Senate adopted a resolution commending Senator Roy Tasco Davis (R., Montgomery) for his work in preparing the George Washington birthday celebration held at the State Capitol Tuesday. The affair was attended by the ranking diplomats of the 21 American republics.

Syracuse Alumni to Dine

Arthur Gabriel, assistant field secretary of Syracuse University, will speak at a dinner meeting of the Syracuse alumni of Washington at 6:30 p. m. Thursday at the YWCA, 17th and K sts., nw.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 23 (AP).—A House "tax cut" subcommittee today urged saving more than five million dollars in the record Maryland budget proposed by Governor Lane.

Delegate Charles M. Bandiere (D., Baltimore, Fifth), and four colleagues said taxes could be reduced two million dollars by turning that much loose from the State accident fund's surplus account.

The rest of the saving could be accomplished by slashing allowances made by Lane to 25 agencies.

Suggestions on Savings

Bandiere told Chairman Leroy Pumphrey (D., Prince Georges) of the House ways and means committee that his subcommittee reached this conclusion in a study of the budget:

"The time has now come to call a halt to the ever-rising appropriations."

Lane's initial budget, to be followed by a supplemental appropriations bill, calls for a total outlay of $130,800,000 in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Ways and means members went over the subcommittee report after sessions which saw:

1. The Senate pass the well-battered McGrath divorce bill authorizing divorce suits after a spouse has served 18 months of a three-year felony conviction;

2. Senator Edward D. Storm (D., Frederick) apply the "clincher" motion to block a measure divesting State Senators of the right to award college scholarships—and Senate President Joseph R. Byrnes (D., Baltimore Fifth) announce that such maneuvers won't work.

Clincher Motion

Storm made the clincher motion during an argument with Senator P. G. Stromberg (D., Howard) over the scholarship measure, a legislative council product.

Stromberg wanted to substitute the bill for an unfavorable report of the education committee. Storm moved that the bill be tabled, then that the motion to table be reconsidered, but that this motion be laid on the table.

In the House, this complicated bit of strategy kills a bill for the duration.

Byrnes announced no such fate would be tolerated in the Senate. He said he would entertain subsequent legislation on the same point, but Stromberg later disclosed he would make no personal attempt to revive the measure.

Scholarship Shift

It would have shifted the granting of scholarships to colleges and universities from Senators to the State Department of Education.

In earlier committee hearings, a proposed 40-hour week for Maryland workers was opposed by an array of businessmen. Some not only condemned the measure, which would require time and a half for more than eight hours a day, or 40 hours per week, but upbraided the Department of Labor and Industry. Department Chairman Joseph F. Didomenico favored the proposal.

Tavern Sunday Closing Opposed by Committee

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 23 (AP).—The Maryland House Alcoholic Beverage Committee today voted an unfavorable report on a bill to require Sunday closing of taverns.

Introduced by Delegate James J. Deran (D., Harford), the measure would apply to Baltimore City and the 10 counties which do not now prohibit Sunday liquor sales.

The committee held a hearing on the bill last week, with about 400 persons attending. The Lord's Day Alliance, Women's Christian Temperance Union, the State Council of Churches and other organizations supported it.

Belgium to Get 16-Million Loan

Brussels, Feb. 23 (AP).—A loan of 16 million dollars will shortly be made by the International Bank of Reconstruction in Washington to the Belgian National Bank.

This was authorized by the Prince Regent of Belgium in a decree published today in the official Belgian gazette "Le Moniteur."

The loan is destined to finance economic reequipment in Belgium.

Postlude

Dr. Sowerby Is Honored In Program

By Paul Hume

One of America's leading musicians was honored last night in a program of his compositions in Washington Cathedral.

Leo Sowerby, organist, conductor and composer, and 1947 winner of the Pulitzer Prize in music, was presented in all three of his capacities. The Chicago musician has performed outstanding service to the cause of American music. His most notable contributions lie in the field of choral works for the church, and in writing for organ.

Dr. Sowerby played his Rhapsody for organ, a new prelude on a hymn tune, and the stunning Toccata. He also directed the men and boys of the Cathedral choir in three anthems, and accompanied Charles Greene, baritone, in newly published settings of three psalms.

In all, a familiar harmonic vocabulary of romantic dissonance was present.

Sowerby drew precision and beauty from the choir, which was trained by its regular master, Paul Callaway.

Two of these, Psalms 100 and 121, have already been given strikingly beautiful choral settings by Sowerby. The solos possess a tenderness surpassing much of his usual style. It is well that we should honor our prominent musicians while they are with us. We are indebted to the District chapter of the Guild of Organists for the privilege.

Arriving at Constitution Hall in time to hear Artur Rubinstein in a score for which he is justly famous, we were shocked: Shocked at one of the poorest performances of a piece of music for soloist and orchestra we have ever heard.

Manuel de Falla's Nights in the Gardens of Spain is a subtle, fragrant work. It must be played with vigor yet delicacy. It should possess rhythms and melodies peculiar to the sunny peninsula.

It emerged last night with the pianist striving valiantly but against impossible odds. Where possible, his playing was admirable. Dr. Kindler would not or could not keep the orchestra together, or meet the soloist's tempo. Three times in the slow movement alone Rubinstein was obliged to proceed on his own, having attempted to establish some sort of definite pace.

The orchestra was helpless, being obliged to follow the conductor, though they preferred, obviously, to play with the piano. We regret so unhappy an affair with so noted a soloist.

Hyattsville Citizens Fight Sidewalk Bill

A proposed legislative bill to permit Hyattsville City Council to order sidewalk construction without consent of property owners and then to bill the property owners has Hyattsville up in arms.

Mrs. Edmund Sousa charged that should the bill become law, it could cost her and her husband an estimated $5000. That is only $100 more than the assessed valuation of their residence, situated on a 210-foot lot at 5600 38th st., Hyattsville.

According to Mrs. Sousa, construction of a sidewalk around the property would necessitate removing part of a high embankment on which her home rests, grading, and erection of a retaining wall.

Under the present code, written approval of 51 per cent of the abutting property owners must be gained before the city council may order construction of sidewalks. The proposed bill, drawn up by the mayor and council, would permit laying of sidewalks where necessary to protect school children, its proponents claim.

Hugh A. White, 3606 Hamilton st., vice president of the West Hyattsville Citizens' Association, another opponent of the plan, said the bill "gives too much power to the mayor and council."

Although sidewalks already are constructed at his residence, White said yesterday he "objects very strenuously" to the proposed legislation, and predicted it would not become law.

outstanding talents of various sorts which matched his business astuteness.

During the twenties he made his living as a writer in New York City. One short story, "The Hat of Eight Reflections," won him the O'Henry Memorial Prize in 1923, and he won honorable mention for the next four years in the volume of best stories of the year published by Edward J. O'Brien.

He did no writing after 1930, when his last story was published in the Saturday Evening Post. After the death of a brother in 1930 he returned to Bristol to become associated with his father, James A. Mahoney, sr., who accumulated a fortune in dry goods and real estate. He took charge of the family fortune after his father's death.

When Eastman Kodak Co. was developing color film in the 1930s, Mahoney was working on a similar project in his home laboratory, friends said.

He also developed improvements in radio and recording devices it was recalled.

During World War I he served as an ambulance driver in France and lived in Paris for three years after the war.

After graduation from Emory and Henry College, he tsudied journalism at Columbia University and later taught English at the choir school of the Cathedral of St. John and Divine in New York City.

Mahoney never married. There are no imediate survivors and there was no evidence he had left a will.

Bill Would Require Skull, Crossbones on Liquor

Des Moines, Feb. 23 (AP).—A bill to require that all liquor sold in Iowa be labeled with a skull and cross bones and marked "poison" was introduced in the Legislature today.

It also would require liquor labels to carry the words:

"Antidote: Pour contents of this bottle in the sewer and place bottle in ash can."

Does Stomach Gas and Bloat Make You Feel Miserable?
If so, here is how you may get blessed relief in freeing your stomach from this nervous distress. It works this way:
Everytime food enters the stomach a vital gastric juice must flow normally to break-up certain food particles; else the food may ferment. Sour food, acid indigestion and gas frequently cause a morbid, touchy, fretful, peevish, nervous condition, loss of appetite, underweight, restless sleep, weakness.
To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.
Also, SSS Tonic helps build-up non-organic, weak, watery blood in nutritional anemia—so with a good flow of this gastric digestive juice, plus rich red-blood you should eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better.
Avoid punishing yourself with overdoses of soda and other alkalizers to counteract gas and bloating when what you so dearly need is SSS Tonic to help you digest food for body strength and repair. Don't wait! Join the host of happy people SSS Tonic has helped. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle of SSS Tonic from your drug store today. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

U. S. Good for 1000 Years, Truman Says

President Truman said last night that the United States Government was "good for a thousand years" as long as people are really interested in its welfare.

He spoke to 150 of America's leaders in finance, agriculture, labor, education and newspaper publishing gathered here for a two-day conference with Treasury officials to plan for a spring campaign to sell Government savings bonds. The campaign, to be called the Opportunity Bond Drive, will open May 16 and continue through June 30.

Secretary of the Treasury Synder, who introduced Mr. Truman at the Mayflower dinner, announced that the goal in the drive would be the sale of $1,040,000,000 in bonds.

The President, attired in a gray business suit, told the bond-drive leaders that they were doing "a wonderful thing" for the country, and also for those whom they persuaded to buy bonds.

"Keep up the good work," he said. "As long as people are interested in the welfare of the Government, as you are interested in it, I haven't any doubt as to its stability and its lasting power. I think we are good for a thousand years."

Mr. Truman said he realized that those who have come here to help the Treasury were busy people. But their contribution to the Government, he said, was what made this country great. He added:

"Whenever an emergency faces us, I don't care whether it's a bond sale or a snowstorm or a flood, we always find the people at hand willing to make this great republic what it is—a company of good neighbors, who think only of the welfare of the country as a whole. That's what you are doing. You are making a contribution just as great as you made in the wartime."

Secretary Snyder cited two chief reasons why the Treasury is putting on the savings bond drive this spring—to give the widest possible distribution to the enormous national debt and to encourage better citizenship by getting as many Americans as possible to invest in the Nation's securities.

Gov. Paul Dever of Massachusetts shared the speaker's platform with Mr. Truman and Snyder. Vernon L. Clark, national director of the Savings Bond Division of the Treasury, presided.

Vigorous Speech Expected From Truman Tonight

President Truman is expected to make a vigorous political speech when he appears at a Jefferson-Jackson Victory Dinner tonight.

More than 3000 persons have paid $100 a plate to attend the dinner, which will be held in two hotels here—the Statler and the Mayflower.

The Chief Executive will eat at the Mayflower, and make an extemporaneous talk. Then he will motor to the Statler, where he will make his major address. This will come at 10:30 p. m. and will be broadcast over the networks of the American Broadcasting Co., the Columbia Broadcasting System, Mutual Broadcasting System, National Broadcasting System, Continental-FM and over Station WINX.

The program will be televised by the American Broadcasting Co., Dumont and National Broadcasting Co., networks, and will be carried as far west as St. Louis.

MORE NATURAL GAS FOR HEATING

WE have been assured that the supply of natural gas to this area will be increased for next winter. Accordingly, we feel that we will be able to supply more gas for house heating and the emergency limitations on the use of gas for space heating in this area have been rescinded effective February 25, 1949. However, it will be necessary for us to watch carefully peak load requirements so that demand does not exceed supply. This can be greatly facilitated by having all future installations of gas for space heating registered—by the installer—with the Company. This registration will also insure the proper sized meter, the lower heating rate schedule, and other service advantages which we provide for our heating customers.

Doctors Hit AMA Plan as Inadequate

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 23 (AP).—New opposition to the American Medical Association's plan to combat national health insurance came today from six prominent doctors, said to represent more than 160 others.

The latest move in the internal fight within the AMA over how to defeat the proposed Government program was disclosed by Dr. Edwards A. Park, emeritus professor of pediatrics at Johns Hopkins University here.

Dr. Park said in a statement that a letter criticizing the AMA program as vague and inadequate was sent yesterday to Dr. Elmer L. Henderson, chairman of the AMA board of trustees, and Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the AMA journal.

Referring to the 12-point national program made public by Dr. Fishbein recently, the letter calls the plan "merely statements of objectives customary as a preliminary procedure in drafting a plan."

The Baltimore physician said he signed the letter on behalf of himself; Dr. George Baehr, Columbia University professor and past president of the New York Academy of Medicine; Dr. Walter Bayer, Harvard University professor and chief of medicine at Massachusetts General Hospital; Dr. H. F. Helmholz, chief of pediatrics at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn.; Dr. Hugh Morgan, Vanderbilt University professor and one-time brigadier general in the Army Medical Corps, and Dr. W. Barry Wood, Washington University professor and chief of medicine at Barnes Hospital, St. Louis.

New Board To Be Aided By Lawrenson

Retention of Charles S. Lawrenson, Montgomery County civil service commissioner, for an "indefinite period" was announced yesterday by Acting County Manager I. G. McNayr.

Despite appointment of a three-member personnel board by the County Council on Tuesday, Lawrenson will stay on to work with the new board on personnel matters, McNayr said.

New appointees to the board are Mrs. Edith A. Dinwoodey and Lewis B. Sims, both of Chevy Chase, and Malcolm White, of Sunshine, Md.

Sims, an active charter supporter, is special assistant to the assistant chief, Bureau of State Service, United States Public Health Service. He worked on the personnel project of the Hoover Commission and in 1939-40 served as a member of the President's Committee on Civil Service Improvement.

Mrs. Dinwoodey, a director of the charter committee, is a former teacher and worked for four years in the personnel research bureau of the United States Civil Service Commission.

White owns a 235-acre farm at Sunshine, Md. and practices general farming and raises livestock.

Pirate Cache Site Thought Discovered

By Graham Berry

Los Angeles, Feb. 23 (AP).—Searchers believe they have located the position of the fabulous "lost loot of Lima," pirate booty estimated to be worth 500 million dollars. It supposedly is buried under the shore of tiny Cocos Island off the west coast of Costa Rica.

Patterson

Ellis Patterson, who sailed from here January 21 with the 444th expedition to search for the pirate gold, returned by plane last night to report.

James A. Forbes 4th, claims that with the aid of metal detectors, he has located the treasure under the beach.

"At any rate," said Patterson, former lieutenant governor of California, "the machine showed a deposit of metal underground."

Maryland's Mental Hygiene System Criticized

ignorant of this major field of medicine."

The report was prepared by the Joint Council of Maryland Pyschiatric Societies on its own initiative. The study group was headed by Dr. Theodore Lidz, associate professor of pyschiatry at Johns Hopkins in Baltimore, and president of the Maryland Pyschiatric Society. The other members were Dr. A. Russell Anderson, Dr. J. G. N. Cushing, Dr Paul V. Lemkau, and Dr. H. Whitman Newell.

Asked about the report's claim that teaching of psychiatry at the University of Maryland's medical school, in Baltimore, was inadequate, Dr. Harry C. Byrd, president, said "I'm compelled to admit that's correct." He said the university was teaching psychiatry as "most other medical schools and I believe it is generally recognized that most of this teaching is inadequate."

Byrd said that the proposed psychopathic unit of the university's hospital in Baltimore was needed to correct this deficiency.

The report submitted to Governor Lane today suggested certain long-range solutions but said "that the first essential steps towards the improvement of the State hospitals are so clear that it seems unnecessary for the Governor and Legislature to await detailed recommendations from any group of experts." There are now under way six separate official investigations into Maryland's mental hospital affairs.

The council recommended that the State allowance per day per patient be increased at once from the present $1.80 to $2.75. This would require an annual budget of nine million dollars. Governor Lane said he will recommend a total of $8,500,000 for next year for this purpose.

The group said that an immediate construction program costing 20 million dollars should be undertaken for the fiscal year of 1951, to start meeting the urgent need of "at least 2800 beds for the patients now in the hospitals." There are now 8925 patients in Maryland's five state hospitals which have space, "according to minimal standards" for 6127.

Governor Lane recommended a 20 million dollar construction program in a special message to the Maryland general asembly last week.

Recommendations Made

Actually, the council said, the following is needed:

1. A 15-million-dollar annual operating budget to bring the per day per patient allowance up to the American Psychiatric Association's recommended minimum of $5.

2. That the Commissioner of Mental Hygiene be given further authority and responsibility and that he get no less than $15,000 a year, with salary increases all along the line. The present commissioner, Dr. George H. Preston, now gets $8750 a year.

3. That a training program for psychiatrists, nurses, social workers, therapists and other specialized personnel be undertaken with the suggested 300-400 bed psychiatric hospital as the training nucleus.

The report pointed out that the mental hygiene problem affected the public as a whole because only the "wealthier segment of the population can afford private hospitalization for mental illness which minimally costs in the neighborhood of $4000 a year" and may require such care for many years.

Proper Treatment Lacking

A number of patients now sent to the State hospitals "could recover sufficiently within a period of one or two months to be sent home for ambulatory care if intensive hospital therapy and follow-up treatment were available," the psychiatrists told the Governor. Neither the intensive hospital care nor the out-patient service is now available, the report complained.

Temporary quarters for 1000 overcrowded patients, improvements in food and clothing, better pay and quarters for personnel, and virtual elimination of restraint (strait-jackets, locked chairs, etc.) were labelled as urgent by the psychiatric group.

The report also stated that provision must be made for the separate care of psychotic children without segregation. Pointing out that separate facilities must now be provided for white and Negro patients, the report said that it would be extremely difficult to provide proper care in two institutions.

Shortage of Doctors Causes Military Hospitals' Closing

Secretary of Defense James Forrestal yesterday ordered a curtailment and consolidation of Army and Navy hospital facilities to produce economies and relieve the "critical shortage" of service doctors and dentists.

Three big, general hospitals will be closed and three others reduced in status. In addition, 48 smaller, station hospitals, including those at Fort Myer, Va., and Andrews Air Force Base, Md., will be shut down and replaced by dispensaries.

Patients from Fort Myer will be sent to the Fort Belvoir (Va.) station hospital and those from Andrews to Bolling Field.

In addition, Forrestal ordered:

1. That general hospital type patients from 38 Army, Navy or Air Force bases be sent to suitable hospitals of another military service, instead of to more distant hospitals of the same service.

2. All hospitals used jointly by the armed forces be staffed by both Army and Navy doctors and that outstanding specialists and civilian consultants of both medical services be employed regardless of the service to which attached.

The Defense Secretary followed the recommendations of a special board headed by Dr. Paul R. Hawley, former chief medical director of the Veterans Administration. The board was named to eliminate duplication of medical facilities.

Forrestal said that by July, the armed forces will be short 1600 doctors and 1160 dentists. By December, the shortage will be 2200 physicians and 1400 dentists.

"Most of this shortage," he said, "will be represented by men who received their professional training at Government expense and who will have completed their tours of obligated duty."

The armed forces now have a Nation-wide drive under way to recruit medical and dental volunteers. Particular attention is paid to those who were educated at Government expense during the war or who were deferred from military service to attend medical and dental schools. If the drive fails, service officials may ask a special draft for such men.

The three general hospitals to be closed are the Naval Hospital at Pearl Harbor, the McCormack Army Hospital, Pasadena, and the Twenty-second Army Hospital at Guam. The Army general hospitals at Anchorage, Alaska, Fort Totten, N. Y. and Camp Dix, N. J. will be reduced to the status of station hospitals.

Adm. Parsons Joins A-Bomb Strategic Team

By The Associated Press

An authority on atomic warfare has been named to the national military establishment's team for fitting strategy to modern weapons, it was learned yesterday.

Rear Admiral William S. Parsons, associated with the A-bomb throughout its development and use, was appointed a member of the "weapons system evaluation group." Parsons was at the Los Alamos laboratory when the world's first A-bomb was assembled and secretly tested.

Later, aboard a B-29, he set the bomb trigger mechanism for one of the two wartime attacks on Japan. At the 1946 Bikini experiments, he was the Navy's top technical director.

Voice Of Democracy

Four young Americans Wednesday received high honor for their ability to express in simple language their credo of democracy. These four—Kerron Johnson of St. Paul, George Morgan, jr., of Hutchinson, Kans.; Charles Kuralt of Charlotte, N. C., and Richard Caves of Everett, Ohio—are all high school students. They were feted at a luncheon here for their winning entries in the annual "Voice of Democracy" contest sponsored jointly by the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Broadcasters, and the Radio Manufacturers Association.

The phenomenal success of the contest is indicated by the fact that more than 250,000 young men and women took the trouble to write up in five-minute radio script form their thoughts on the meaning of democracy. To the listener the winning essays were rewarding evidence of the real grasp of principle young people manage to attain despite all the isms and the efforts to force conformity. Although they did not attempt precise definitions, the speeches were eloquent testimony to what democracy is. To some it is the right to speak one's mind unfraid, to some the material reward of political forms, to others the strength of many voices. But through them all ran a theme of responsibility, a recognition that democratic rights require the duty to defend and expand those rights for everyone. We congratulate the winners and the thousands of others who examined their beliefs and put down in succinct form the faith they live by.

Save Our Brethren

Nowadays it is perfectly clear that within the last six months the President has grown prodigiously both in public esteem and in self-esteem. The evidence was his off-the-cuff defense of his friend and military aide, General Vaughan. A week or so ago General Vaughan was decorated by the Peron government. The citation accompanying the award spoke of General Vaughan's "virtue as a soldier and an American." "You are a loyal friend of my country," it went on, "and also a brilliant soldier of the United States." The event was discovered and criticized by Mr. Drew Pearson. And this newspaper joined in the criticism. To all this the President took frenetic exception in the language of the boon companion rather than in that of a President. It appears that it is "vicious and unjustified" to attack a friend of the President.

The relation between Harry Truman and Harry Vaughan is a touching demonstration of personal loyalty. The President's addiction to and gift for friendship have, of course, been pretty well established. But, judging from Tuesday's display of it, the "trait" would seem to partake of the characteristics of amicism, or the disease of friendship. For the friendship of the two Harrys has nothing at all to do with the question at issue. It is, as it were, a red herring. This is apparent when it is borne in mind that what the President said will seem to many Americans not the effusion of a friend but the declaration of a political philosophy more at home in dictatorships. The persons at whom the criticism was leveled happen to be the President of the United States and his military aide. Neither of them would be of the slightest interest to Juan Peron in anything but their public capacities. In their public capacities they have a public trust the nature and obligation of which are legitimate subjects of public comment in free America.

Now it was precisely because public office is a public trust that the Constitution contains Section 9, clause 8, prohibiting any public official from accepting a foreign decoration without consent of Congress. Why did the founding fathers so hedge the freedom of public officials? To ask the question, it would seem, is to answer it. But, apparently, the reason—which is available in the ratification debates on the Constitution—has to be underscored. The founding fathers knew that the foreign betowal of favors upon public officials places the Government under the most insidious form of pressure.

In the present case the fundamental fact to remember is that Peron's Argentina is in pretty bad straits. Distress signals are coming north accompanied by balloons hinting that American aid or Marshall dollars would be more than welcome. It is even suggested that Argentina might even join the World Bank if that is the condition of getting a loan. The placement of a decoration or two in the most strategic places is part of the campaign. Not that either the President or his military aide would be influenced in the slightest by the proffer. On the contrary, both may have felt embarrassed, and did not know what else to do than accept. In this respect Congress could help, and do what the founding fathers plainly intended Congress to do—remove any embarrassment or any temptation which the donation of what in this particular case is obviously intended as a sort of bribe enmeshes the recipient.

Adventurist Diplomacy

It is emphasized by both the State Department and the Norwegians that Norway's decision to become an initial signatory of the projected North Atlantic Security Pact was not the result of American pressure. There is, indeed, no evidence of any direct pressure. Neither in Oslo nor in Washington has there been any overt move to elicit Norwegian participation. However, there was no need for direct action. Where the heat has been applied has been in Sweden, and this, of course, has been felt in both Oslo and Copenhagen. It developed in intensity two months ago when the State Department declared publicly that signatories of the pact would have first call on the American arms that all the Scandinavians are anxious to acquire.

Maybe Norway would have been eager to sign the Atlantic Pact, anyway. Norway is wedded to the Atlantic world in livelihood and in spirit. An old saying is that when it rains in London, they begin to put up their umbrellas in Oslo. To be sure, Norway sought to keep out of the last war till the German invasion thrust her into it. But it was an unnatural disentanglement, as every present-day Norwegian realizes. The lesson is clear to every Norwegian. It is rubbed in by the legacy of the war in the shape of a coterminous border with a neighbor which has built up a record of aggression and has already betrayed an appetite for bases in Norwegian territory, to wit, Russia. The orientation of Norway to the Atlantic world has been intensified by Sweden's Mr. Unden's parrotlike and spurious use of the word neutrality as the goal of Scandinavian policy. The word is repugnant to a country like Norway which has paid dearly for a neutrality which in the last war exposed rather than sheltered it.

Now we must all wait and see the consequences of a decision which this newspaper deplores as unnecessarily provocative. It is to be expected that Copenhagen will follow Oslo into the Atlantic alliance. The links between the two capitals are too close and too cordial to permit Norway to take this plunge alone. What Moscow, which had warned Norway against making the decision, will do is conjectural. Will the Russians take it lying down? The odds are that they won't, though there is no reason to expect action against Norway. Finland, already under new pressure from Moscow, will probably be made to pay for Norway's defiance. Specifically, Russian activities might be brought right to the Swedish border with Finland. This could be done without violating the Russo-Finnish Treaty, but it may alarm the Swedes enough to plunge them headlong into the Atlantic Pact.

In sum, the entry of Norway has an incendiary potential. It may promote the very trouble that the pact is intended to prevent. For, no matter how the Atlantic Pact is now worded, the extension of the pact to Norway endows it with military overtones. If Sweden had been less traditional in her words, and the United States less adventurist in her diplomacy, Norway might have been deterred from a move which seems to sharpen the Russo-American conflict gratuitously.

Federal Pay Policy

Changes in the Government's salary scales recommended by the Hoover Commission are almost as sweeping as its proposed personnel recruitment plan. At present the Government has four different pay policies that give rise to many inequities. About 850,000 "white collar" workers are under the Classification Act. Some 600,000 "blue collar" workers receive wages fixed by individual agencies. Postal workers, numbering 480,000, are paid in accord with detailed laws passed by Congress, and other special laws fix the compensation of various other groups. The result has been slow adjustment of wages and salaries to meet changes in living costs in addition to giving unequal pay for equal work.

The commission recommends one governmental pay policy. Congress would fix minimum and maximum rates of pay. The Civil Service Commission, with the approval of the President, would establish individual pay scales and job-evaluation standards. The plans would actually be carried out in the different departments and agencies. Pay scales for clerical, subprofessional, postal and "blue collar" jobs would be varied to take into consideration differences in locality, area and industry. Salaries fixed on a Nation-wide basis would be reviewed annually by the Civil Service Commission and the President could promulgate changes, within the limits prescribed by Congress, taking into account fluctuations in the cost of living. The greater flexibility of this system as well as its uniformity as to general principles commends it.

Special consideration of salaries in the higher administrative and professional brackets is urged. Federal employes in the lower grades have had their pay increased between 43 and 56 per cent, while pay in the highest grade had increased by only 15 per cent. Undoubtedly that is a chief reason why the Government has lost so many men and women of talent in these categories in recent years. "Government can never compete on a dollar-for-dollar basis with private industry for persons in its top positions," the commission says. "It can and should, however, treat such persons in an equitable manner." The task force study on which the full commission's recommendations were based suggested a salary ceiling in the top civil service grades of $15,000. Certainly that is not unreasonable in view of the fact that several States and municipalities pay key administrators up to $25,000.

The people and Congress must get accustomed to the idea that big government demands highly skilled administrative talent to avoid appalling waste and inefficiency. And that talent must be paid for. No fabulous salaries are in order, but the head of a vast governmental agency certainly ought to earn as much as a minor official in industry. Along with the better recruitment of trained personnel, this recommendation must be regarded as a cornerstone of the reorganization plan.

Welcome Mat

Maurice Thorez didn't in so many words tell French Communists to fight with the Red army in the event it should arrive on French soil in the guise of liberator. By phrasing his remarks in the form of a question he endeavored to escape prosecution for what amounts to treason. But his intent was certainly treasonable, and if his followers have no trouble understanding the unvoiced answer to his question, neither will anyone else.

The Trojan Horse technique certainly functions best when kept a secret up till the moment of action, and this overt indication that French Communists will, given the opportunity, open the gates of France from the inside to an invading army would appear to destroy in advance their fifth column value. The explanation may well be elsewhere to seek. It probably covers likewise the recent threat by General de Gaulle to take direct action if things don't go his way by democratic processes.

For both the Communists on the Left and De Gaulle on the Right have been losing ground fairly rapidly in France. The "weak" government that few expected to last long or accomplish much of anything has shown both toughness and success. It isn't out of the woods, to be sure, but its courageous handling of the strike of coal miners last fall and the quiet progress it has made in promoting recovery seem to have infused it with new strength.

Conversely, the political fringes, both nourishing themselves on and fomenting discontent with existing conditions, have lost support and know it. The extremity to which their spokesmen have gone testifies to—and probably contributes to—this flight toward the center of the road. Thorez's invitation to the Red army is less an expression of social solidarity than a confession of failure. The only hope of Communist ascent to power in France, he implies, is through the arrival of the Red army. In a sense, therefore, Thorez's words ought to be welcome. They may herald the demise of effective Communist strength in France not because they invite governmental prosecution, but because they will alienate every Frenchman who loves liberty and country more than he loves Stalin.

UMW's Welfare Fund

Although differences of opinion exist regarding the proper method of establishing and administering industrial welfare and retirement funds, there is no disputing the fact that coal miners are in greater need of disability and retirement benefits than the great majority of workers. A pamphlet just issued by the United Mine Workers describes in some detail the nature of the benefits now being paid to disabled miners and their dependents and outlines plans for the hospitalization and specialized care of the victims of mine accidents. Already quite a number of men paralyzed as a result of such accidents have been greatly aided by this special care. Last week seven paraplegics injured by rock and slate falls in mines were brought to Washington to be treated at a local hospital.

Even more impressive evidence of the good work being done by the welfare fund is the fact that 63,583 disabled UMW members and 109,081 wives and children of these men have received benefits, while more than 2000 workers or members of their families have been given medical and hospital care. This is a gratifying record of accomplishment; it is at the same time a reminder that the coal mining industry has an appallingly high accident rate. Only occasionally is the public aroused to a realization of the hazards of the mining industry when a particularly shocking disaster, such as the Centralia mine explosion, occurs. Now that the cost of caring for the injured and aiding the dependents of those disabled or killed in mine accidents has become an obligation of the industry, it seems likely that self-interest will spur the operators to greater efforts to improve working conditions.

For every million man-hours worked 65 disabling accidents occurred in the mining industry, compared with 30.8 such accidents in the construction industries and 18.6 in manufacturing industries. The percentage of fatal accidents in the mines is also far ahead of that in other industries. Disabling diseases such as tuberculosis and rheumatism, occupational in origin, also help to account for a much higher death rate for miners—15.1 per 1000, as compared with a rate of 10.3 per 1000 for the Nation as a whole.

By adding these victims of disease to the list of killed and injured, which totaled nearly 235,000 for the past five years alone, it becomes possible to envisage the terrific cost in human lives and hardship of the millions of tons of coal used by the people of this country. Pensions do not compensate for such sufferings, although they alleviate the misery of disabled miners and lighten the economic distress of the victims' families. The next step should be an intensified effort on the part of mine operators, unions and public authorities to make mining a safer occupation.

Progress In The South

In the year past there was but one lynching in the entire South. Southern liberals, of both races, will not abate their efforts to make the record clean—and keep it clean.

In a recent statement Dr. Howard W. Odum proposes a 21-point program, which contains the following:

"To accelerate the prevailing Southern processes of improving race relations and of increasing and equalizing educational facilities for all the people.

". . . to protect the great mass of Negroes from outsiders who would weaken or destroy their extraordinary systems of schools, churches, industry, and self-developed programs which have amazed the world by their mastery and the effectiveness of their training grounds for progress and leadership.

"And finally, somehow to stop this intersectional bitterness and to do the job before us in spite of all the complexities and cultural immaturity of many groups; to take the controls away from partisan extremists; to guard against those ideas and acts which seek to inflame and divide the people through irresponsible agitation and violence."

The late Senator George Norris decided, after long study, that he could not support Federal anti-lynching legislation. His reasons are thus given in his autobiography:

"I think it would be a bad mistake if Congress should pass the so-called anti-lynching bill. I am opposed to the bill because I believe it would do more harm than good even to the colored race . . . It would have a tendency, I think, to halt the progress which has been made. . . . I do not want the Federal Government to take up this burden which the people of the South have carried so well."

The issue of civil rights should be removed from the field of Federal coercion and lifted above the atmosphere of sectional strife, political expediency and interracial enmity.

Brotherhood Week

Brotherhood Week, held this year between February 20 and 27, is an urgently needed acknowledgment of that unity which makes all men brothers.

Whatever the name employed, every religion has postulated one supreme spirit or principle, all-powerful, all-benevolent, all-pervasive. And each religion, in its own terms, has added to those postulates the belief that all men are brothers.

Marvels of science have made obvious on the physical plane a global unity. Man has now but to conquer his own sense of separateness; to say, in effect, that every man is his neighbor.

This he does say, more and more, as the Red Cross and like organizations can testify. But, great as these are, brotherhood includes also an appreciation of differences—differences of culture, race, religion. The more earnestly each of us endeavors so to live that we can appreciate as well as sympathize with our fellowmen, the more force we add to world harmony.

"Housing For Millions"

Your February 21 editorial recognizing the possibilities inherent in Walter Reuther's idea for building prefabricated houses is gratifying. Mr. Reuther's plan is definitely a step in the right direction.

Too frequently we have the need for certain products evaporate as supply catches up with demand. Such dislocation may be of a temporary nature or of longer duration, dependent upon the particular product. We know too well what happens to both men and machinery when this condition exists. We also are aware of what happens to the country as a whole when we have an accumulation of such situations.

How do we solve this dilemma? The answers may be found in the projection of ideas such as Mr. Reuther's into various industrial activities now facing the dilemma. Possibly, some real cooperation between business and Government would turn the trick. Industrial capacity, even though at considerable expense, must be employed with continuing flexibility.

I would recommend that the Department of Commerce, the Reconstruction Finance Corp. and various associations of industry give this idea of flexible production immediately consideration. ALBERT CHAIKEN.

Foreign Service Merger

The Hoover Commission report on the suggested reorganization of the State Department referred to the likelihood of difficulty or delay in completing the amalgamation of the Foreign Service and State Department personnel. It is to be hoped that neither Congress nor the higher command of Messrs. Acheson and Webb within that department will be deterred from their efforts. For the opposition is not widespread, but merely from one section of career Foreign Service officers who see a threat to their special privileges.

It is historic fact that the French, Dutch, Swiss, Spanish, British, Brazilian and Italian diplomatic establishments have an amalgamated service. Doubtless there are many others.

Top grades of Foreign Service men get a salary of $13,000, medical attention in Bethesda Naval Hospital, 60 days leave, and retirement payments in excess of those received by their coworkers in State. But they do the same kind of work.

Let them work together, be paid and retired on the same basis, and open up the higher grades, such as Ambassador, Minister and consul general, to the healthy new blood of experienced and capable State Department men who are not eligible, under present practice, for such promotions.

Ezra Pound's Prize

The Library of Congress' Fellows in American Letters, when on February 19 they awarded the first annual Bollinger prize for poetry to Ezra Pound, had this to say:

"To permit other considerations than that of poetic achievement to sway the decision would destroy the significance of the award and would, in principle, deny the validity of that objective perception of value on which any civilized society must rest."

By this restatement of a traditional concept, namely that of the poet as an "unpolitical" man, the Fellows have, in our opinion, raised far-reaching assumptions which end by unsettling the very principle they seek to defend, and exposed their award of the $1000 prize to an American under indictment for treason as an irresponsible act.

Let us grant for the argument that Pound's Pisan Cantos is indeed the "highest achievement in American poetry" for the publishing year 1948. Let us even waive for the moment the sound contention that Pound himself, in many of his writings, does not draw the distinction between "poetry" and "life" which his 13 admirers have drawn in the statement accompanying his award.

There is yet the obtrusive and overwhelming fact that the "other considerations" referred to by the Fellows involve what the Department of Justice in 1943 and 1945 persuaded a Federal grand jury were overt acts of treason against the American people. The transcriptions of Pound's broadcasts from Rome were filled with the hymns of hate by which the Fascists and the Nazis proclaimed the particular "value perceptions" on which their own "society" was to rest.

Echoes of this hate are found in Pound's Cantos. The Fellows are apparently untroubled by them, given the greater validity of an "objective perception of value." In our opinion, they may, as critics, go that far; they must, however, go further.

In the traditional role of a poet, Pound had the alternative of "escaping" the war. He had the alternative other writers have chosen of advocating a philosophical pacifism or maintaining conscientious objections in confinement. Could he choose the alternative of enlisting in the totalitarian campaign of hate and confusion directed toward his own country and its leaders and yet affirm, as his admirers do, "the validity of that objective perception of value on which any civilized society must rest"?

"Poetic achievement" should indeed "sway the decision" if the question involved were Pound's right to publish his work in America, and that right would have to be defended even if he were in a Federal prison rather than in a mental institution. The same consideration should sway any mere pronouncement of his "highest achievement" by one critic or a group of them.

But their own talk of "values" is made meaningless when a group of modern writers make a semipublic award to a poet indicted as a traitor during a war threatening the very existence of a society they can still call "civilized." The fact that the Bollingen prize need not be granted at all in any given year adds to the confusion.

In view of the difficulties which modern poets already face in winning public interest in their work, it is doubly unfortunate that the Bollingen award has come to muddy the waters. The "prize poet" is either a man suspected of treason, or one who is of unsound mind! The public's reaction to this dilemma cannot help but be a further estrangement between modern poets and a potentially attentive reading audience.

New Patterns Of Marriage

By Malvina Lindsay

Younger Parents

PRESENT MARRIAGE trends, of which the Nation is now taking stock, are due to affect many phases of our future national life—child-rearing, divorce, housing, employment, culture, politics.

Though marriages began to fall off in 1947, this is regarded as only a natural dip from the wartime marriage boom. The long-time marriage pattern seems to be toward more marriage and toward earlier marriage and parenthood. Hence, everyone from sociologists to manufacturers of teething rings is asking how this will affect his business.

Marriage trends can be followed only from 1867, when the Census Bureau began collecting information on marriage and divorce. These show that a larger proportion of the country's adult population is married now than at any time since that date. Also, contrary to popular belief, Americans are marrying and setting up homes at earlier ages than at any time since 1867. In 1890 the median age of men for first marriage was 26.1, for women 22. In 1947 it was, respectively, 23.7 and 20.5. Now in this country 1 out of 8 girls between 15 and 19 is married—a higher percentage than in most Western nations.

ALSO children are being born to younger parents. A recent study by Editorial Research Reports points out that the average couple under present marriage patterns would have had their children in their 20s, and these would have left home by the time the wife was 50 and the husband 53. The couple could then expect to live together for about 11 years.

This pattern also includes less difference in age than formerly and a longer life together after the children are reared. The old tradition that a wife should be half her husband's age plus seven years has lapsed as the toll of death in child bearing has been lightened.

Some fear this marriage pattern will encourage divorce by relieving couples early of their parental responsibilities. Others think it will encourage parenthood and thus wield a closer union between husbands and wives in the formative years of marriage. It will probably encourage the present tendency of mothers to stay home while their children are small and to go out to work as the offspring get older, or when they leave home.

It will bring into society a great mass of middle-aged women with lightened home duties and with energies to expend in clubs, politics, civic work, culture—or employment. It will present a need for flexible housing in communities, since dwellings suited for growing families will be white elephants for the couples beginning the long final stretch alone.

This earlier parenthood will mean parents closer in spirit to children and youth. Yet one danger in it is that very young couples are frequently unprepared for the complex job of marriage and child rearing. And statistics show the hazard of divorce is greater when the bride or bridegroom is under 19.

MANY MEDICAL authorities and social hygienists have been advocating marriage at least in the early 20s as productive of easier bearing of children and a solution of many social problems of youth.

Another economic depression would no doubt temporarily lower the marriage rate, since it is sensitive to income. In 1932 the number of marriages in proportion to population was the lowest since 1867. However, other influences affect marriage. The slaughter of men in the Civil War accounted for many a spinster of the 1870s. The "new woman" of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, who swelled the ranks of bachelor girls and single career women, was in part in rebellion against the hard domestic lot of the pioneer wife.

At present both economic and social attitudes indicate continuing enthusiasm for marriage. The strong trend of wives to work outside the home encourages marriage opportunities that did not come to the sit-and-wait woman. Then there is a growing tendency of parents to subsidize to some extent marriage for their children. Mobility of population encourages marriage and has removed the handicap the New England crop of spinsters faced when their men went "out West." Now girls can follow men to Alaska if necesary. Also there has been a strong reaction in thinking against the nineteenth century "genteelism" that subtly emphasized celibacy for women.

Religious Symbol

May I draw your attention to the notice underneath the picture of the antique lamp held by Earle Richardson in The Washington Post of February 22 in which it says the religious symbol "PX" stands for Christ and Peter. This is absolutely wrong.

I am quoting from a little book Sign Language of Our Faith: "In Christian symbolism certain letters have been in use since the early centuries. Chief among these monograms is the chi rho. It is composed of the first two Greek letters of the word Christ in Greek.

Peter has nothing to do with it. It means "Christ."

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Defense Of Weak Nations

THE OTHER day the New York Times reminded us that in January, 1947, Soviet Russia asked Norway for military bases on Spitzbergen. Sovereignty over Spitzbergen was disputed by Norway, Sweden and Russia for nearly 50 years until in 1919 the Supreme Council of the Allies of the First World War awarded it to Norway. The treaty awarding it was later ratified by the Soviet Union. This group of islands, which lies far north in the Arctic Ocean, has now become of very considerable strategic importance because it is on and near the air highways of the Arctic. The direct route, for example, from Seattle to Moscow would pass right over Spitzbergen.

Lippmann

The demand was refused by Norway and, as the New York Times says, "Soviet Russia did not get the Spitzbergen bases." Its editorial writer cites this incident to explain, at least in part, the desire of the Norwegian government to enter the Atlantic Pact.

PERHAPS. But what also needs to be explained is why in 1947 Norway was able successfully to refuse the Russian demands. Two years ago nobody had mentioned an Atlantic Pact. Nobody had mentioned the Marshall Plan. Nobody had mentioned American rearmament based on conscription. Norway itself was, of course, virtually disarmed and there were no military defenses on Spitzbergen. What, then, caused the Russian government to refrain from insisting, indeed from putting some troops ashore to take the bases?

There can be only one explanation: the realization that if the Norwegian refusal was overridden by force, it would be an act of overt aggression, that is to say an act of war, which would arouse the United States and Great Britain, whose vital interests would be affected, to countermeasures of force.

THIS incident, illustrating the successful defense by a weak small country of an undefended territory, is worth thinking about. For there are, as it were, Spitzbergens all around the vast periphery of the Soviet Union—for example, South Korea, Iran, Turkey, Norway and Denmark. None of them, that is to say, could now or in the foreseeable future be defended successfully against invasion by the Red Army.

Are they then undefended? The answer is that they are defended, not because the Red Army could not march in if the Kremlin gave the order but because the Kremlin will not give the order unless it is prepared to fight, not Norway or Iran, but the United States. In military jargon the weak and exposed countries are defended not by their local defenses but by the balance of power.

BUT ARE they defended adequately? The answer, it seems to me, is that the menace of the Red Army remains wherever it is capable of making contact with a Communist fifth column. The essential menace of the Russian power lies in the combination of the Red Army and the local Communist fifth column. It is the combination of the two that anyone who would conduct affairs must bear in mind.

The local Communists alone—separated from the Red Army—have never anywhere at any time in more than 30 years succeeded in establishing themselves in any country. They have tried it in many countries but have always been suppressed. Nor is there any case, except the very special case of Finland in 1940, where the Red Army has invaded another country. Eastern Europe was overrun in the great counteroffensive against the Nazi invasion of Russia.

BUT THERE are many cases where Russia has expanded her power by the combination of the local Communist apparatus and the Red Army. Czechoslovakia is an example. The reason the Czechs could not resist the internal Communist attack was that in a civil war the Red Army was in a position to help the Communists while the Western powers were incapable of helping the anti-Communists. China illustrates the same principle in another way. Though there is no evidence of substantial Soviet military support of the Chinese Communists, the Russians could have given it quite easily. They could more easily and more cheaply have reinforced the Chinese Communists than we could have reinforced the anti-Communists. For they have a common land frontier 4000 miles long with China.

Yugoslavia illustrates the same principle. The reason Tito could rebel was that, unlike Benes, he had an open frontier with the West and no frontier with the Red Army. Almost certainly the Soviet pressure on Hungary, of which the Cardinal's trial is a feature, is actuated by the fact that from Hungary direct pressure can be exerted on Yugoslavia.

IF THIS analysis is correct, then, the danger points in the world are those places where there exists actually or potentially a fifth column within marching distance of the Red Army. It follows that the cardinal principle of our over-all strategy should be to prevent the combination of the Red Army and the fifth column.

The combination cannot exist in countries into which the Red Army, checked by the fear of a world war, cannot advance. The combination will not exist wherever the Red Army retires and loses direct contact. The combination will not exist where there is no fifth column, where through good government it is not encouraged, where by strong government it can be suppressed indisputably.

Washington Calling

Politics And Depression

THE ECONOMIC medicine men are anxiously studying the signs and portents to try to determine just what is happening to us. They come up with strange words such as "disinflation," which may or may not mean the same thing as deflation.

Childs

Inevitably, of course, politics enters in. Within the Truman Administration the belief is growing that Republicans in a kind of secret alliance with big business are trying to talk the country into a depression. This belief is shared by important officials directly concerned with fiscal policy.

Contributing to that belief is the confidential report of a waiter who served a luncheon of top-level Republicans meeting with Gov. Thomas E. Dewey during Dewey's recent visit to Washington. The waiter reported that the conferring Republicans agreed the one sure way to defeat the Democrats in 1950 and '52 was a depression which would bear Truman's name in the same way the depression beginning in 1929 carried the Hoover label.

You can see the clear line of a political division over the significance of the present economic trend. To Administration Democrats and most of their economists recent reports of unemployment in certain areas are indicative merely of a few soft spots in the economy. They quickly point to the fact that more people are working than ever before as proof that the trend is still inflationary.

BUT THE Republicans in Congress make speeches predicting depression and insisting the preliminary manifestations are already with us. A tax increase, they argue, would only serve to speed up the decline. They are counting on signs of depression to block not alone the Administration's proposed four-billion-dollar tax increase but the whole anti-inflation program with its standby price controls.

In one arena the contest between inflationists and deflationists has been going on for some time. That is the Federal Reserve Board, which was given power by Congress last summer to control consumer credit.

Focus of the battle is the board's Regulation W. Regulation W, which became effective last September, establishes the ratio of installment credit to purchase price. On automobiles, for example, the buyer must make a down payment of one third of the price and pay the balance in 18 months.

The pressure to change Regulation W comes from several sources. Certain automobile manufacturers, conspicuously Kaiser-Frazer, say it must be modified. They claim that it discriminates against lower income families who would like to buy new cars but are prevented by Regulation W.

Dealers who find it harder to sell washing machines, radios and other durable consumer goods are also agitating for a change in the ruling. At least, they say, extend the time of payments from 18 to 24 months. Pressure has come, too, from secondhand car dealers.

WITHIN the Federal Reserve Board the chief defender of Regulation W is Marriner S. Eccles. Eccles, it will be recalled, stepped down as chairman of the board when President Truman named Thomas B. McCabe, a Philadelphia manufacturer, in his place. As a member, however, he retains a potent influence and he is allergic to what he considers political pressures aimed at altering economic policy.

In the inner sanctum of the board Eccles makes two principal points against any change in Regulation W at this time. He says, first, that to relax the ruling now would have the effect of sustaining prices at their present levels by enabling those least able to buy to sign up for lengthy installment payments at inflated prices. If it is true that the trend is still inflationary, then keep Regulation W in effect and let prices drop in what will be, in part at least, a buyer's market.

Second, he points out that the total of outstanding credit is still growing. There will be time enough, Eccles argues, to change the ruling when credit stops expanding.

While these are powerful arguments, the indications are that a majority of the board will eventually decide to let the buyer take more time to pay for his auto or his washing machine. That is the easy way out of the political pressure building up from day to day.

But those who remember the crash of 1929—the beginning of that Republican depression—cannot forget the bubble of installment credit of the late twenties. That was not a sound base for prosperity nor is it today. The first step—from 18 to 24 months—is bound to be followed by more pressure for more relaxation.

Blond Beauty's 16 Baths a Day Wows Chicago Builders Show

By Conrad P. Harness
Post Reporter

Chicago, Feb. 23.—A beautiful, 21-year-old blonde who takes 16 baths a day is the hit of the annual convention and exposition of the National Association of Home Builders.

An estimated 16,000 builders, architects, building supply dealers and others in the building industry will have seen Miss Helen Olson, "cleanest girl in Chicago," perform her act before the convention closes Friday.

Miss Olson, a well-proportioned, $40-a-day model, attracts standing room only crowds at the booth of Hotpoint, Inc., manufacturers of bath and kitchen equipment.

Every half-hour Miss Olson, wearing a clinging bathing suit, steps into a glas enclosed shower stall, turns on the water, and demonstrates the pleasure of taking a shower with water heated by Hotpoint's 80-gallon tank.

This merchandising stunt is typical of those used by exhibitors at this vast fairyland of building materials and housing equipment.

Of the 208 manufacturers represented in the exhibit area of the Stevens Hotel, several have spent upwards of $50,000 to put their product before this select group of buyers.

More than 6000 home builders, including 64 from Washington, are the target of the exhibitors sales campaign. With production lines operating at fever pitch, competition has returned to the building supply field. Builders can pick and choose in nearly every line.

For the first time since the war nearly exery exhibitor can tell prospective customers exactly what his product will cost in the Washington area and when delivery can be made.

The only Washington firm represented is Timber Engineering Co., which displayed a framing anchor designed for economies in light wood construction.

Pictures of Washington's new Dupont Plaza Hotel are shown at the booth of Parsons Corp., manufacturers of the compact Pureaire kitchen. This one item includes a stove, sink, refrigerator and cabinets and will be used in efficiency apartments at the new hotel, expected to open in April.

Recession Helpful, Snyder Says

The Nation is in for "a continued prosperous period," Secretary of the Treasury Snyder said yesterday.

The recession scares that have arisen each year since 1946 have been, and again can be "turned to our advantage," he said in a luncheon talk at the National Press Club. He explained it this way:

"They are an annual deterrent to overexpansion and overspeculation. In that sense, they've been very helpful."

Food Index, After Fall, Climbs For Second Consecutive Week

New York, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—The Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food price index, which fell sharply the first seven weeks after the Christmas holidays, has climbed for the second consecutive week, the agency reported today.

For the week ended February 22, the index rose 2 cents to $5.78. This was $1.58 lower than the all-time high reached on July 13, 1948, and 83 cents lower than the index one year ago. The record low was $4.49 on January 31, 1933.

Stock Feeders' Group Asks Meat-Meal Cut

Kansas City, Feb. 23 (AP).—Restaurants were called on today by the head of the corn belt Livestock Feeders Association to cut their meat-course dinner prices in line "with the break in wholesale and retail meat prices."

Lawrence Brock, of Wakefield, Nebr., president of the association, said failure of hotels and restaurants to keep in step with the meat price drop had made meat courses too expensive for their customers' pocketbook.

"Wholesale beef carcasses have broken 45 per cent since last July on the good grade, heavy carcasses which the hotels and restaurants use," Brock said, "yet steak and roast beef dinners are practically at the same levels as they were at the peak."

About 300 delegates were present at the opening session of the association's two-day convention here.

Loans on REAL ESTATE

Here are three of the more popular types of real estate loans The Washington Loan and Trust Company makes on improved business and residential property in the District of Columbia, nearby Maryland and Virginia. A loan plan can be designed to meet your special needs and at low interest rates.

1. MONTHLY AMORTIZATION PLAN—Under this arrangement interest charges and principal payments are paid once each month like rent.

2. TERM LOAN PLAN—Straight mortgage loans are available covering a specified period of time—at a standard, low rate of interest.

3. F.H.A. LOAN PLAN—If you wish, you can borrow under this F.H.A. insured plan. Monthly payments cover interest, taxes and principal reduction. Loans for home repairs and modernization, too.

Man, 53, Faces Trial In Child Sex Case

Max Zipkin, 53-year-old Washington area builder, went on trial yesterday in District Court on five charges of taking a 13-year-old school girl across State lines to debauch her.

He is also charged with having carnal relations with the girl in his automobile at Hains Point.

Soon after the trial opened, the girl testified that on three of the occasions charged, Zipkin did not have sexual relations with her. The other three charges are to be covered today in the trial before Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut.

Conviction on any of the six charges may carry the death penalty. Prosecuting the case is Assistant United States Attorney Arthur J. McLaughlin. Defense attorneys are James A. O'Shea and Alfred Goldstein.

In his opening statement, McLaughlin declared that Zipkin, who resides at 3119 18th st. ne., was a long-time friend of the girl's family and acted under the guise of "paternal interest."

He stated that the out-of-town sex offenses took place in a bungalow at North Beach, Md., at a tourist camp near Atlantic City, N. J., in Zipkin's Hyattsville office, and at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel in Philadelphia. The acts allegedly occurred in 1947 and 1948.

According to McLaughlin, Zipkin began giving the girl his small winnings from card parties and after the affair was under way paid her as much as $20 a week.

The case was brought to light, McLaughlin stated, after Zipkin accused the girl's 17-year-old brother of living with her as man and wife. An uncle overheard this conversation and reported it to the youths' parents who in turn notified police.

The first Government witness, Max Tatelman, operator of a tourist court near Atlantic City, testified that on December 12, 1947, Zipkin and the girl shared for the night a cabin that contained a double bed.

The alleged victim, a shy and plump brunette, was asked about the Hains Point, North Beach and Atlantic City incidents.

In each, she repeatedly stated that she and Zipkin did not have intimate relations. She also denied that there was a double bed in the New Jersey tourist camp, insisting that there were twin beds.

Luray Strikers' Delegates File Capitol Petition

Thirty-five striking employes of the Virginia Oak Tannery, Luray, Va., yesterday filed a petition with the Senate Labor Committee urging repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Prior to presenting the written protest, the workers, members of the International Fur and Leather Workers (CIO) Local 265, attempted to picket the committee room with placards. Capitol police told the men bearing placards inside Capitol buildings was forbidden, and escorted them to the Senate hearing.

The group represented employes of the tannery who have been on strike 40 weeks. Workers and management are stalemated over wages, seniority, job security and the strikers' refusal to accept a contract.

Stolen Safe Held $68,000, Not $10,000

A safe theft on January 23 reported as amounting to $10,000 yesterday was said to have totalled some $68,000 to $70,000.

The reported victim was Richard H. Beckley, 69-year-old retired detective sergeant who now operates a poolroom.

Yesterday Beckley filed suit in District Court against the arrested suspects, asking a money judgment against them for some $60,000 in cash and $8000 to $10,000 worth of jewelry which he claims was in the stolen safe.

Police said uniformed patrolmen questioned the victim after the theft and reported a loss of some $10,000. Detectives who followed up the case, however, were told the loss amounted to $60,000 in cash alone but did not reveal the higher figure to reporters at the request of the victim who said he was "in fear of his life," a detective said yesterday.

The suit named Stance W. James, 30, shoemaker, and Oliver James, 35, waiter, as defendants.

The brothers were arrested Sunday and charged with theft of a safe from Beckley's home.

The suit also requested that the Police Department be restrained from turning over to the James brothers a 1948 Caddilac coupe and motorcycle, allegedly bought by the brothers with "the fruits of the crime." The suit said the car and motorcycle were believed to have been taken into police custody.

Beckley has told police he came home early January 23 to surprise three men removing the safe. He was held at bay, he said, at gunpoint until the men loaded the safe in a car and then sped away.

The Washington Post erroneously reported the James brothers had been held for the grand jury Sunday on burglary charges by United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence. Actually, the case was continued until March 10.

Alexandria Hospital Audit Report Made

Three Alexandria groups met yesterday to hear a report from the firm which audited Alexandria Hospital's books as part of an effort to find a long-range solution to the hospital's financial ills.

At the meeting in the George Mason Hotel were members of the Alexandria City Council, the board of directors of the hospital, and of the citizens committee which will seek the solution. The report was given by representatives of the firm of Ernest & Ernest, accountants.

The meeting, held behind closed doors, lasted more than two hours. None present would comment, but Chester G. Pierce, chairman of the citizens committee said the auditors had given them "only a preliminary report."

Pierce said he would call a meeting of his committee and issue a statement to date.

The audit resulted from the hospital's confession last fall that it must close unless it received more funds. The city gave it $20,000 and then set the investigation in motion.

Richmond City Office Account Found Short

Richmond, Va., Feb. 23. (AP).—State Auditor J. Gordon Bennett today reported to Governor Tuck his office had uncovered a discrepancy in the expense accounts of Grey P. Hulce, Richmond city treasurer, amounting to $15,288.98, over a five-year period.

Bennett's report came only a few hours after Hulce's resignation was accepted by Judge John L. Ingram of Hustings Court. City Sergeant Walter B. Gentry was named to the post.

In commenting on the audit, Bennett said:

"Our findings were reviewed with the treasurer, and on February 21, 1949, he paid into the treasury of the Commonwealth $15,288.98 to cover the total excess of expenditures claimed from and paid by the Commonwealth over expenditures established by the audit to have been due the treasurer."

Expense allowances for city treasurers and some other county and city officers are handled by the State compensation board.

Bennett disclosed that the treasurer had made proper accounting for all Commonwealth revenues of record collected by his office.

The treasurer was under bond with the National Surety Corporation in the amount of $600,000 from January 1, 1942, through December 31, 1945, and in the amount of one million dollars with the same surety for the term beginning January 1, 1945, and ending December 31, 1949.

Bennett included a table in the report, which showed that the excess of expenditures claimed over those established by the audit were: $1097.26 in 1944; $2204.64 in 1945; $2653.05 in 1946; $4014.41 in 1947 and $5319.62 in 1948.

Boy of 11 Absolved In Playmate's Shooting

Baltimore, Feb. 21 (AP).—Raymond H. Hall, 11, was absolved today of shooting a 10-year-old playmate to death, and Magistrate Julius A. Romano told him.

"Never again in your life are you to put your hands on a revolver, either a toy or real. You have brought sadness to someone else and to yourself."

The magistrate then dismissed the charge of assault by shooting.

Kansas Cityan Named to High D. C. Bank Post

By S. Oliver Goodman

Justin D. Bowersock 3d, of Kansas City, has been elected executive vice president of the Union Trust Co. of the District of Columbia, it was announced yesterday.

Bowersock

Bowersock will assume the newly created position on March 14, according to Linwood P. Harrell, Union Trust president.

A Missouri banker for 20 years, Bowersock is now a vice president of the Union National Bank of Kansas City where he has been in charge of the correspondent bank division. In addition his duties have included the supervision of local and national accounts and the soliciting of new commercial business. He also has shared in management of the bank's bond account.

BABSON'S VIEWS: Roger W. Babson, the economist who predicted the 1929 stock market crash, now forecasts a gradual recession which won't hit bottom until 1952 or 1953. "The business honeymoon," Babson said, "is over and we should once more realize that we cannot loaf our way to prosperity . . . I do not expect a sudden drop as occurred in 1920-21, 1930-32 and 1937. Instead of falling out of the 20th story window, we will walk downstairs."

PLAN OUTLINED: T. Wesley Matthews last night outlined to trust officers of local banks how to proceed in setting up a common trust fund. The plan, if authorized by Congress, would enable Washington trust companies to pool smaller estates and give them the same full investment service as for big estates. Matthews, vice president of the Girard Trust Co. of Philadelphia, pointed out that legislation for the common trust fund has been approved in 30 States and 60 such funds are in operation. Bruce Frantz, chairman of the Fiduciaries Section of the District Bankers Association, presided at last night's dinner meeting in the Burlington Hotel.

BANK LOANS OFF: The fifth successive decline in business loans by leading city banks in the Federal Reserve system was announced by the Federal Reserve Board. A Nation-wide decline of 28 million dollars resulted in the week ended February 16 from drops in Western districts. They were partially offset by moderate increases in business loans in the Eastern part of the country.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Vice Admiral Emory S. Land (retired), wartime chairman of the Maritime Commission, has been elected a director of Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. . . . John E. McKeever, sales manager of the Washington real estate firm of Leo M. Bernstein & Co., has been promoted to general manager . . . Leo R. Gilleran, former controller of Trans World Airline, has been elected treasurer of Encyclopaedia Britannica, Inc., and its affiliated companies . . . Milton Guttenplan, formerly with the Washington advertising firm of Kal Ehrlich & Merrick, has joined Emil Mogul Co., Inc., of New York as an account executive

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 23 (AP).—A boost in the Government buying price for cash wheat provided the background today for advancing prices on the Board of Trade. Wheat and corn both had gains of more than a cent while soybeans spurted as much as 3 cents.

The market opened higher and showed a firm undertone most of the day, except for one selling wave near the close. At that time deferred deliveries of most commodities sank below the previous close. But the selling soon spent itself and prices bounded back in active dealings.

Wheat closed ¼@1½ higher, corn was 1¼@1⅝ higher, oats were ½ lower to ¼ higher, rye was 1¼ higher, soybeans were unchanged to 3 cents higher an dlard was 10 cents lower to 9 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Private trade sources said the Commodity Credit Corporation was buying wheat at Kansas City for May futures there. That meant a gain of 2½ cents since Monday, and followed open increases in the premium on several days last week.

Red Cross Rally Held By U. S. Unit

The 1949 Red Cross campaign for $924,000 in the Washington area got off to an early start yesterday, as Government unit workers held their kick-off rally, a week in advance of the official campaign opening Mareh 1.

More than 2300 Government campaign workers gathered in the Interdepartmental auditorium at noon to hear talks by Labor Secretary Tobin, Agriculture Secretary Brannan, aand Federal Works Administrator Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming.

Brannan reminded the meeting that the Federal group never has failed to reach its quota fixed at $434,000 this year.

H. Randolph Maddox, general campaign chairman, said campaign funds would make possible continued operation of the Red Cross blood center, which collected 20,000 pints of blood from volunteer donors last year.

Maddox, who is president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., asked workers to increase the total of Red Cross contributors, who have declined in number since 1945, he said.

Special gifts unit workers, at a second luncheon held yesterday in the Hotel Statler, reported they have met almost half their unit goal.

$100 Reward Set in Death Of Veteran

Police yesterday offered a $100 reward for information leading to the identity of two men who fatally injured a World War I veteran here January 29 in a street fight.

The veteran, Albert L. Potter, 48, suffered a fractured skull in the fight which occurred outside the Royale Tavern, 1836 Columbia rd. nw. He died February 13 in Mount Alto Hospital.

Police said Potter got into an argument in the tavern with two younger veterans of World War II over "who were the better soldiers." The argument climaxed in the fight outside.

The reward offer, announced by Chief of Detectives Robert S. Bryant, said one of the men has been seen in the tavern on previous occasions, at times accompanied by a woman. Police said it is believed both men may live in the neighborhood.

Thefts Trap 25 Teen-Agers InMontgomery

Montgomery County Police yesterday added 25 teen-age youths to their list of 40 teen-agers apprehended less than a month ago in connection with a wave of thefts in the county.

Questioning for two weeks of the latest group—all are under 18 years of age—brought forth about $350 worth of wheelbarrow tires, wheels and radio equipment, stolen largely from construction projects, police said.

The tires and wheels are perfect fits for motor-scooters, a popular means of teen-age transportation, police said.

"Most of these boys are first offenders," said Capt. Joseph S. Nolte of Silver Spring Substation. "Many of them are from our finest families."

Police said parents have been notified in each case, and the youths will be reported to juvenile authorities.

Knitting Machine Goes Haywire; Creates Fashion

London, Feb. 23 (AP).—A knitting machine that went berserk has created a new fashion.

Millworkers discarded a length of rayon jersey material because the needles got mixed up and knitted a crazy pattern of stripes and checks.

A fashion designer saw the piece by chance, and a dress made of it was a hit at a fashion show here.

Textile manufacturers said they could duplicate the haphazard design by loosening bolts and otherwise throwing their machines out of joint.

Hoover Aide to Speak

The Deep Freeze...

For twenty-five years there was no more eager beaver in business than Bill Whitely.

At college, he was the only man in his fraternity house who really read all the Alexander Hamilton Institute course books all the way through!

During the years he was moving ahead in his company, the business magazines filled much of his brief case, nights and weekends.

The war boosted both the company and Bill. The company came out in fine shape, but Bill found himself just another over-fifty, overweight, overtired executive, with bi-focals, and an almost grown family he didn't know very well.

Now his off hours are taken up by television, mystery stories, movies and time-killers he once disdained... And most of the business publications are deposited in the big side drawer of his desk that his secretary calls "the Deep Freeze"... usually to emerge weeks later in the Outgoing tray!

THE Deep Freeze is a factor that must be faced by all advertisers to the business markets.

New problems, difficulties, conditions take more of the business man's time, energy, thinking.

Business publications, periodicals, newspapers ...all have more pages, more content, carry more advertising... take more time and energy to read.

Something has to give somewhere. With more to read, less time and energy for reading... more and more business men settle for Nation's Business these days. And the advertiser to business might profitably do the same!

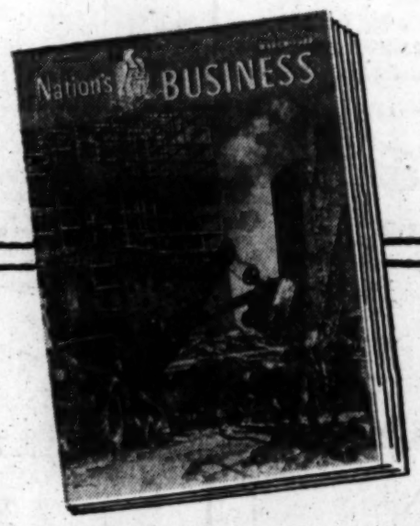
NATION'S BUSINESS is not a substitute for your newspaper, trade bulletins, or the New York Stock Exchange ticker... specializes in intelligence rather than information.

In a world where too much is going on... the knowledge of what happened yesterday is not as important as to understand why it happened. Effects are usually obvious, causes often anything but... Nation's Business elects to scale the forest rather than chop down a tree... to appraise in advance rather than view-with-alarm later. It is more concerned with the long trend than the quick turn or quick dollar, with helping to make events make sense!

Inflation, Russian aims, national defense, ECA, raw materials supply, Ruhr restoration, government finances—labor legislation, most of the headlines that make headaches... were briefed by Nation's Business three to twenty-four months ago. And its readers were advised of important developments in time to do something about them... which is one of the reasons why Nation's Business has gained readers and respect for the past ten years.

Issued monthly, it doesn't gang up on you, can be read at your convenience. And everything in it is worth reading, written and edited for quick, easy reading by non-experts.

WITH more than 650,000 circulation, Nation's Business influences the majority of the men who influence most of the nation's business... offers the advertiser more coverage in the whole field in every classification ... is the easiest and most economical means of sending a sales message where it counts most... getting action and response, prestige and profits! ...Maybe you ought to know more about Nation's Business? Call any office.



Common stock... must be bought by the public, to raise new capital... see "Speculate or Stagnate," by Francis Adams Truslow, Pres. New York Curb Exchange.

Only as old as you eat... diet deficiencies explain many ills of old age... Huge new business possible in foods for folks over 40... by Peter J. Whelihan...

British loan... benefitted both borrower and lender ...read a penetrating analysis by Francis Williams...

"Greener Pastures Nearer Home," Connecticut state promotion brought 659 new plants, $5 million foreign orders... see success story by Clarence Woodbury...

"The Prudent Man's Last Stand," passing of the Boston trustee... required only to exercise "reasonable discretion" in estate management... by Milton Lehman.

Business statistics... better than business because of compilation time-lag... soft line price breaks spread to hard lines... but most government economists still fear inflation rather than deflation. Many other significant interpretations of trends and tendencies in "Management's Washington Letter."

And a dozen additional stimulating articles for the business man in the March Nation's Business.

Ladd's Western Is Extra Snazzy

By Richard L. Coe

"WHISPERING SMITH," which might be the name of a radio crooner, turns out to be Alan Ladd mowing down the enemies of the old Nebraska & Pacific Railroad. Paramount has shot the wad on this Old West action film at the Warner, and it's good of its kind, rich in Technicolor, rushing music and blood-letting.

This morning I again find myself in the familiar position of upholding Brother Ladd, who always takes a trouncing from the high-powered names in this reviewing business. Ladd's stock in trade is a blank look and a quick trigger finger. I can't see how he's any worse at it, say, than Dick Powell, Dennis O'Keefe, Robert Taylor, Errol Flynn or any other of the boys who always win over impossible odds.

The odds this time aren't too impossible. Ladd plays a trouble-shooter for the head of the railroad and is assigned to a division of the road that employs his old pal, Robert Preston.

Preston obviously has been doing well for himself, buying a ranch on a slim income and loving a wife—Brenda Marshall—who would have been Alan's five years before had the guy only spoken up faster. But Bob's fallen in with some shady companions, notably Donald Crisp, and he's been reselling goods from wrecked trains, an old-fashioned trick on which the road's prexy looks with disfavor. When Bob loses his job he takes to wrecking trains and stealing freight for a living.

Naturally this can't go on, and it's up to Ladd to stop it, which involves personal problems. Bob's his friend and Brenda's his Own True Love. How things work out you can imagine.

Barring the predestined developments of such a setup, Paramount has lavished a deal of care on the proceedings—a snazzy Technicolor job from Mme. Kalmus, a pleasingly throbbing background score from Adolph Deutsch, some sets that look likely, a couple of shady ladies to suggest Preston's fall from grace and a few goodish laugh lines. All told, "Whispering Smith" is a treat for those who like movies with their popcorn.

The Warner shorts an amusing cockeyed cat adventure in a haunted house, a fascinating sports short on collie dogs, one of those "Unusual Occupations" series and the Warner-Pathe news.

THE CAPITOL'S holdover of "Command Decision" also includes its stage show, headlined by Dick and Gene Wesson, the comedy boys who hold up as one of the better vaudeville turns . . . Sam Jack Kaufman's "Salute to the Kingbirds of the Sky" continues to employ all sorts of the Capitol's trick mechanics, and you'll also enjoy the suave taps of Lathrop and Lee . . . Marion Carter is the songbird.

THE BAKER'S DOZEN benefit tonight brings in a solid musical jam to Uline's, where Woody Herman, the King Cole Trio and Jack Costanzo will be on tap . . . Cole's outfit now includes a bongo man, and all hands promise novelties not yet recorded or aired . . . Spots downtown to buy tickets include the AAA, the Willard Hotel agency and the National Drug Store, 1000 Connecticut ave. . . . The Baker's Dozen benefit is to raise funds for their midcity Teen Age Club . . . Last year the Negro charity's benefit with Duke Ellington enabled them to buy two buildings in the 1500 block of Fourth st.; this drive is to put them in operating order.

THIS WEEKEND'S visitors will include Charles Laughton and Jessica Tandy, down to air "Payment Deferred" from the stage of Constitution Hall for the Red Cross drive . . . Laughton's next picture is "The Bribe," to follow "Command Decision" at the Capitol with Robert Taylor and Ava Gardner . . . Miss Tandy, of course, is still playing the frustrated heroine of "A Streetcar Named Desire" in New York and probably will be doing so as long as she chooses . . . The carefully-rehearsed Theater Guild show will probably be keeping Constitution Hall busy most of Sunday, if last year's Madeleine Carrol-Brian Ahearne performance was any criterion . . . Vice President Barkley and Economic Cooperation Administrator Hoffman will begin the evening with brief talks, but don't ask me how to get tickets . . . I don't know and, what's more, they're all gone!

THE HISER, in Bethesda, today racks up a remarkable record, bringing back "Sitting Pretty" for its seventh Hiser engagement . . .

"WHISPERING SMITH," a Paramount picture produced by Mel Epstein, directed by Leslie Fenton, screen play by Frank Butler and Karl Kamb, based on the novel by Frank H. Spearman. Music by Adolph Deutsch. At the Warner.

The Clifton Webb solution to the sitter problem seems to be just what the suburbanites cry for, and I don't blame them . . . Also at the Hiser will be "Miracle on 34th Street," for its fifth Bethesda visit.

Snowslides Bury Driver and Truck, Injure 4 Others

North Bend, British Columbia, Feb. 23 (U.P.) — Three mountain snowslides buried a driver and his truck under tons of snow today and hurled four of his would-be rescuers 200 feet down a docky cliff.

The driver was in a convoy waiting for crews to clear a path on the Trans-Canada Highway near here, which had been covered by a previous slide.

As the convoy began to move, another slide shoved the truck down the mountainside.

The four men who tried to rescue the unidentified driver suffered cuts and bruises when they were struck by a second and third slide.

Track Picture Extols Virtues Of Pretty Girls and Horses

By Orval Hopkins

"THE RETURN OF OCTOBER," a movie at the National Theater, makes very little effort to approximate anything that's at all likely to happen. There's no nonsense about holding, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature, and it's a good thing or it's almost intolerable, depending on how you are about such items.

The story has to do with a young girl named Terry, played by Terry Moore, who fancies her dead Uncle Willie (James Gleason) has returned to our restless footstool in the form of a horse called October. There are three lines to this tale: Her bubbly young love affair with a youthful college professor (Glenn Ford); her struggle with some repulsive relatives who want to deprive her of the family dough when the rich aunt dies; and her overpowering desire to win "the Derby"—with, of course, October.

If you can't guess how all three of these turn out you might as well stop going to the movies, and you certainly better stop trying to figure the horses.

Miss Moore is a new and utterly luscious young lady who looks as if she studied acting by going to the movies. She wiggles, she bobs, she swings the hip, she gasps, she twinkles, she pouts. She's a lovely girl, as I say, but she ought to be in some good high school appearing in the senior play. Ford was using his head a little more than Miss Moore was, it seemed to me, but of course he's not exactly equipped the way she is, either.

Probably the most unlikely scene is the one in which Miss Moore, in a tight sweater—one of those low-slung, off the shoulder jobs—sort of gambols around Ford on her hands and knees, whilst they picnic beside a stream. Ford will have none of her, so he's obviously either crazy or a big sissy. The picture doesn't purport him to be either.

There are some respectable people buried in this film and I don't know what to make of it, except possibly that gold is thicker than anything. Among them are Dame May Whitty, Henry O'Neill and Samuel S. Hinds. They seem quite credible in their roles and thus bring you up with a terrible start from time to time.

There are also two groups of Hollywood ingredients—the "repulsives" and the "heart o' golds." The former are, of course, the relatives with whom Miss Moore is forced to vie for the money bags. Two women and a man, they all look as if they had crept out of a cave somewhere. The others are the rough-exterior types who frequent the track, are solid pals of Miss Moore's and eventually put up the entry fee so October can enter the Derby. It's quite a show.

This was my first visit, incidentally, to the National Theater since the Big Switch, and I can report that they've certainly gussied the old girl up. It's practically worth your money to step in there and take on a load of the new carpeting, the high mirrors, the trick doors and the yards and yards of slick brass rail. She's really a lady now. Be nice if they could—oh, let it go.

"THE RETURN OF OCTOBER." Columbia release produced by Rudolph Mate. Screen play by Melvin Frank and Norman Panama from a story by Connie Lee and Karen DeWolf. Photographed by William Snyder. Music by George Duning. Directed by Joseph H. Lewis. At the National.

Rubber Union Seeks Pension, Wage Boosts

Cleveland, Feb. 23 (AP).—The CIO United Rubber Workers are going after 25-cent hourly pay boosts and $100-a-month employer-paid pensions when they bargain this year for 180,000 rubber industry workers.

These two demands highlighted a seven-point program which the 164-delegate international policy committee of the union approved last midnight after two days of conference. The 20-member URW executive board then stamped its approval on the proposals.

President L. S. Buckmaster of Akron said the program was "a constructive approach to the two most pressing problems facing our country — declining purchasing power and insecurity in old age."

The pension program was made a secondary objective to the pay raises.

The union's contracts with three of the rubber industry's big four extend until the spring of 1950, but wage clauses may be opened for renegotiation at Firestone June 14, Goodyear June 17 and U. S. Rubber July 1. Goodrich and the URW are scheduled to begin contract negotiations May 23.

Pay rates in the rubber industry average $1.51 an hour for production workers, a union source said. The rubber workers have received 41 cents in hourly pay raises over the last three years.

Normal work schedules in the Akron area call for a 36-hour week of six days, but some plants now are operating only 24, 28 or 30 hours.

Extension of the six-hour day to those plants now on a 40-hour week of eight-hour days was another point in the new bargaining program.

Hearing Is Opened On Minimum Wage

The Government opened its hearing today on a CIO plea for doubling of the 10-year-old minimum wage rate in contracts the Government lets to iron and steel companies.

The CIO steel workers asked Wage and Hour Administrator William R. McComb to boost the minimum rate from 62½ cents to $1.23 per hour everywhere but in 12 Southern States.

The Southern differential has always existed. The union wants that rate increased from 45 cents to $1.08½.

The rate was fixed in January 1939 under the Walsh-Healey Public Contract Law.

After hearings in the next day or two, McComb will recommend a change—or no change at all—to Secretary of Labor Tobin, who then may establish a new rate.

U. S. Steel Corp. and virtually the entire steel industry is fighting the move.

Employers are paying the higher rate now, but some fear it will be hard to get the Government rate reduced once it is raised, even if a depression hits the iron and steel business.

Railroad Shops Reopen After 2-Week Shutdown

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 23 (AP).—The Delaware & Hudson Railroad shops at Colonie reopened today after a two-week shutdown. The 600 employes who had been idle returned to their jobs.

The D. & H. said more than 200 other employes still were on furlough along its line. The layoffs have been blamed on decline in business.

400 to Be Laid Off By Timken Plants

Canton, Ohio, Feb. 23 (AP).—Columbus, Zanesville, Mount Vernon and Canton (Ohio) plants of the Timken Roller Bearing Co. will lay off more than 400 employes Friday because of decreasing business, President William E. Umstattd announced last night.

Federal Spy Jury Hears Testimony Of Nathan Witt

New York, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—Nathan Witt, former secretary of the National Labor Relations Board, testified today before the Federal grand jury investigating Communist espionage.

Witt, a law partner of former CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman, was named by Whittaker Chambers as a member of a prewar Communist "apparatus" that attempted to infiltrate Government circles.

He appeared before the jury for only 20 minutes and refused to comment on his testimony.

The jury also heard two other witnesses, a young man and a young woman, both unidentified.

Three Area Quaker Groups Urge End to Discrimination

Members of the Religious Society of Friends (Quakers) in the Greater Washington area have called for "prompt and friendly" lowering of discriminatory barriers.

A statement, urging an end of such barriers in schools, employment, transportation, and all public meeting places, was approved by the three Friends meetings in the area and released yesterday. Statements of doctrine and practice are made only after united action of Quakers in a regular business meeting, since they have no ecclesiastical officials.

The statement was approved by the Alexandria Monthly Meeting of Friends, the Friends Meeting of Washington, and the Washington Monthly Meeting of Friends.

It pointed out that members of the Society have always believed that "we are all brothers and children before God" and voiced "steadfast opposition to systems and practices which subject the human spirit to indignity."

Members of the Society have found their worship enriched because people of all races and conditions share the fellowship, the declaration said.

"We believe discriminations based on color or race or origin or sex have no place in a society motivated by religious and democratic ideals," it continued. "Unfortunately, in our American society, practice too often contradicts principle."

"We welcome, we support, we urge prompt and friendly lowering of discriminatory barriers in education, in employment, in transportation, in public meeting places of all kinds, and in the exercise of full rights and duties of citizenship," it concluded.

Two Religious Schools Given Zone Sanction

The District Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday authorized establishment of two religious schools, and the building of an addition to a private school.

The religious schools will be opened by the Hebrew Academy of Washington at 6045 16th st. nw., and by the Washingtoh Baptist Seminary at 1600 13th st. nw.

The board permitted the Holton Arms School to build a gymnasium as part of the school at S st. and Phelps pl. nw.

In other actions, the board:

Granted an appeal for permission to establish a parking lot at the northwest corner of 22nd and E sts. nw.

Deferred action on a request by the National Academy of Sciences to open a temporary parking lot at 2101 Constitution ave. nw. pending submission of paving and landscaping plans.

IWO Move Against 'Red' Label Opposed

Judge Matthew F. McGuire yesterday took under advisement a motion to dismiss an action brought by the International Workers Order, Inc., against its having been placed on the Attorney General's "subversive organization" list.

United States Attorney George M. Fay urged the court to dismiss the action, contending that there was no showing that membership in the organization in itself is enough to cause damage such as dismissal from a Government job.

The IWO and one of its members, Arthur L. Drayton, a postal clerk of Philadelphia, Pa., brought the action. Drayton, according to the suit, says he is being investigated by Federal officials because of his membership in the IWO.

Lee Pressman, attorney for the IWO, argued that it is entitled to relief in the courts and that the organization was not afforded a hearing before the subversive stamp was placed on it.

Under the present system, said Pressman, if an unscrupulous Attorney General were appointed, he could label as subversive such organizations as the Knights of Columbus and the B'nai B'rith and they would have no appeal.

Montgomery Tax Appeals Court Named

A new procedure for handling appeals from property assessments in Montgomery County was inaugurated yesterday.

Sworn in by Circuit Court Clerk Clayton K. Watkins were three members of a new appeals tax court. They are Leo Bender, chairman; J. Ernest Hawkins and Charles D. Herron.

They held their first meeting immediately after the swearing-in ceremonies and voted to meet each Wednesday and Friday, at 1 p. m., in the Rockville Courthouse, beginning March 9. The new body also approved many minor changes in assessments recommended by Wilton T. Allen, supervisor of assessments.

Previously protests by property-owners of assessments were heard by the county commissioners. The recently elected county council, which replaced the commissioners, established the Appeals Court.

Property owners and assessing officials may appeal to the State Tax Commission from a decision of the new body, Chairman Bender pointed out.

He explained the new procedure, as follows: When the property owner is dissatisfied with his assessment, he should register a complaint with the assessing office. If he is unable to reach an agreement with assessing officials, he should then file an appeal with the Tax Court.

Montgomery is the second Maryland county to adopt the system. The first was Baltimore County.

Red Labor Leader Quizzed at Airport

New York, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—Louis Saillant, French secretary general of the Soviet-dominated World Federation of Trade Unions, was detained for two hours by immigration officials today when he arrived by plane from Paris at Idlewild Airport.

Saillant, here as chief delegate of the WFTU to the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations, was questioned regarding his political background and his intentions during his stay in this country.

Saillant said that his activities would be confined strictly to council sessions at Lake Success, which begin March 4. He said he had agreed to restrict his travels to the New York area.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THOSE FIRST BASEMEN who are drawing down big league salaries are a lot of sad sackers compared to the fancy-hitting gents of a decade ago, we are being told.

In the current Sporting News it is being pointed out with special force that not a man among the first basemen of last season hit as much as .300, and the whole crew of 'em didn't belt as many homers as Hank Greenberg did in 1938.

POVICH

After all these years when the first basemen in the majors were symbols of slug, and the guy who couldn't sprinkle a lot of homers among a .320 batting average couldn't qualify for a job, the cycle of stardom apparently has swung away from the first sack.

A decade or so ago, they were the top dogs in the majors—the first basemen. Jimmy Foxx could hit 50 homers a year and occasion no surprise. Lou Gehrig would belt a half hundred, give or take a few. Hank Greenberg bashed out 58, back in 1938. Joe Kuhel and George Quinn had years in which they belted 20 or more. Zeke Bonura, too.

But a review of the current American League crop shows their combined total was 57 homers last season. The muscle has gone out of the first base business.

THE SCARCITY of tolerable hitting first baseman was so great that at Boston last season Manager Joe McCarthy divided the Red Sox first base job between Stan Spence, an outfielder, and Bill Goodman, a converted second baseman. The Yankees had to bring in Tommy Henrich from right field before they had a satisfactory first base job.

There is scant balm for the Nats in the fact that they do boast for this season the first baseman who had the greatest output of homers in the league in 1948. Eddie Robinson, the acquisition from Cleveland, gained that distinction, but a closer scrutiny shows that he hit only 16 homers to top the field.

Mickey Vernon, whom the Indians got in the exchange, and who once won the league batting title, was no home run man you might say. He belted a grand total of three for the year. Foxx, Gehrig and Greenberg have swatted that many in a couple of hours. The A's first sacker, Ferris Fain, compiled only seven, Tony Lupien who had the job for the White Sox hit a mere six. McQuinn, a relic of better hitting age, stayed around with the Yankees to hit 11, playing half time.

ROBINSON'S 16 HOMERS that topped the output of the league's first basemen last season offers the best illustration of the decline in power at that bag, perhaps. When Rudy York was around for the Tigers in 1937, he walloped 18 homers during the month of September.

Ever since baseball squared itself away in the 80s and developed policy as to where the bulk of the hitting should come from, first basemen have been rated along with outfielders as the guys who ought to supply most of the power. It was at first base where fielding skill could be sacrificed for the advantages of that long ball, and on that sound theory such as York and Bonura stayed in the majors on the strength of their batting swings.

When the reign of the outfielders as the batting kings of the American League ended after 15 years (the 1905-19 span during which Ty Cobb led the league for 12 seasons), it was a first baseman who finally moved in. That would be George Sisler who batted that amazing .407 in 1920.

THE FIRST BASEMEN reigned as the league's batting champs for a four-year span of their own, with Harry Heilmann of the Tigers sharing the honors with Sisler . . . Heilmann in fact took down the honor with regularity in the alternate years of 1921-23-25-27.

Cleveland owned something special in the way of hitting first basemen in old George Burns, who never set any home-run records, but he did create a new mark for two-baggers. And there was never any more classic stance than the stand-up posture of Burns, who, short with his stride and level with his swing, was a sculpture piece in the batters' box.

With the home-run honors denied him by the presence of Babe Ruth and such, Burns went avidly after the two-bag record. It was 53, I think, that he collected back in one year in the mid-twenties. The Indians were complaining, though, that Burns in his zest to get his doubles, was thrown out at second too many times on ordinary singles, and pulled up at second base with bits of artistic loafing when he ought to have gone for three.

Lasts 2 Rounds . . .

Andy Nathan TKO Victim In Army Bout

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Andy Nathan and Johnny Pratt, the Military District of Washington's two big hopes, fell by the wayside last night as 5500 watched the third round of world-wide Army boxing tournament bouts at Fort Myer.

Knockout victor in 19 of his 21 previous fights, Nathan was outpunched from the opening bell by Joe Murphy of Brockton, Mass, and was unable to answer the bell for the third round. Nathan claimed he broke his right hand. It will be X-rayed today.

Pratt had the bad luck of drawing Austin Jones, Army and Air Force middleweight champion of last year as his foe. Jones danced rings around Pratt, and leveled a constant stream of left jabs onto Pratt's nose.

Nathan Down

Murphy, a 19-year-old First Army standard-bearer, stung Nathan three times with terrific lefts early in the first round and slammed him to the canvas with another left to the jaw 20 seconds before the bell.

Nathan was on the defensive in the second round, but managed to drive in his best blow of the fight, a right uppercut to the chin, which momentarily stopped Murphy.

Thirty seconds before the end of the session, the Brockton lad trapped Nathan in a neutral corner, and gave him a terrific two-fisted beating. Nathan had to be helped to his corner at the bell and couldn't come out for the third round.

Tonight's pairings:

Caps Stop Rollers, Void Sailors' Fine Play, 100-88

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The long and short of it made the most of it as the Washington Caps plastered the Providence Steamrollers, 100 to 88, last night.

Before a Uline Arena gathering which seemed even smaller than the announced figure of 1245, little Kenny Sailors and big Jack Nichols provided the dramatics which enabled the Caps to move within two games of clinching the Basketball Association of America's Eastern championship.

Each scored 24 points, but the performance of Sailors—5-foot-8-inch dynamo from Wyoming, was the more spectacular. The dribbling, shooting and passing star from the West kept his team in the thick of the game until midway the third quarter.

At that stage, Bob Feerick finally shackled him and with Sailors bottled up, the Caps found the path to their sixth straight victory over the Rollers considerably easier.

Theft Pays Off

Little Sailors was a ball of fire last night. He intercepted two passes and dribbled the length of the court for baskets. He also stole the ball twice and converted his thefts into scores for the Rollers.

In the first half, when the lead changed hands 11 times, it was Sailors who was breezing by Sonny Hertzberg and potting shots which enabled the Rollers to overtake the high and mighty Caps five times.

Sailors didn't get started until midway the first quarter. At that juncture, Washington owned a comfortable 10-3 margin, but Sailors flipped in his first basket and the dogfight was on. The teams made the first quarter turn with the Caps ahead, 26-22, but Sailors got hot again and halftime found Washington in front by only one point, 48-47. And Dick Schulz had to throw in a long set shot to provide the Caps with that hair-line margin.

Sailors dropped in 18 of his 24 points before recess, but Feerick soon handcuffed him and the Rollers' expected fate began to take form.

Providence switched to Calverley, Ernie that is, after recess and that little worthy kept the Rollers in the thick of things temporarily with three straight baskets, but he faded too quickly.

12 Out of 21

Nichols, 6-foot-9 rookie star from Washington U., turned in one of the finest offensive shows witnessed here in years. All of his 24 points were made on field goals. He sank 12 out of 21 for a phenomenal .570 average.

In addition to guarding Sailors, Feerick found time to throw in seven of the nine goals he essayed and wound up the evening with 16 points, second only to Nichols and Sailors.

Moffatt's 17 Points High; 55 Personal Fouls Called

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

George Washington stretched its win streak to six and kept in the running for a tie for the mythical District title with a 52-47 victory over Georgetown in a rough-and-tumble contest at the Armory last night.

Lithe Johnny Moffatt, who led all scorers with 17 points, made two vital baskets at the end to help the Colonials stave off a belated Hoya rally that brought the losers within three points with a minute to go.

The victory was the first over Georgetown for GW in the last five outings and only its fifth in the 28-game series. All five Colonial triumphs have been made in the 15 games since the "modern" series began in 1938.

55 Personals Called

Phil Fox and Curly White, local officials, called a total of 55 personals and it seemed all 26 against the winners were booed mightily by the partisan crowd of 2008.

In the final analysis, the uninterrupted parade to the foul lines didn't prove a thing. GW made 18 of its 30 tries; Georgetown converted 17.

Actually, those two last-minute field goals by blond Moffatt and the foul picked up along the way provided the winning margin for the Colonials.

At the outset, it appeared that GW was going to pull its usual freeze against the Hoyas. At the 12-minute mark, Georgetown held a 17-12 edge. Then it appeared that the Hoyas would duplicate their earlier 53-49 win.

But little Gene Witkin, Ray Adler and Johnny Moffatt dumped successive baskets to get ahead by a point and at halftime GW led, 22-20.

Witkin Gives GW Lift

The same Witkin, 5-foot, 8 playmaker, got the Colonials off to a good start in the second half. Witkin dropped three set shots and with help from Moffatt, who countered 12 of his 17 points after intermission, GW soon held a commanding 42-30 lead.

Georgetown had an eight-minute field goal famine and only fouls kept it within striking distance when Vince Leddy ended it with a basket that brought Georgetown up to 45-38.

Then Italo Ablondi, Tommy O'Keefe and Ray Corley all countered to come within four points. Adler tallied a foul and Dick Falvey's driving goal made it 48-45, G. W., with only a minute to play.

That's when Moffatt came through to give the Southern Conference tourney-bound Colonials their fourteenth win in 21 outings. The loss was Georgetown's twelfth in 20 as it bowed out here for the season.

Law Voiding Reserve Clause Asked in N. Y.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 23 (U.P.).—A bill, which is passed, would invalidate all professional baseball contracts in the State, was introduced in the State Legislature today by two New York Democrats.

The bill, designed because of Danny Gardella's $300,000 lawsuit against organized baseball, would make the reserve clause in contracts null, void, and unenforceable.

The legislators, Senator Alfred E. Santangelo and Assemblyman Louis Cioffi, charged that the present practice of restraining baseball players from negotiating their own services with other ball clubs was "akin to peonage, and in restraint of trade."

He contended that the club owners not only denied permission to their players to negotiate with other teams, but "also actively influenced even sandlot teams from engaging the services of those ball players who dared assert their rights to earn a livelihood."

They said that baseball did not need the reserve clause either to exist or to flourish. Baseball players, they said, were deprived of their bargaining power because of the reserve clause and must therefore play for whatever amount is offered them or get out of the sport.

Cioffi cited the Brooklyn Dodgers as a horrible example of the workings of the reserve clause.

"The Dodgers player salaries are hardly commensurate with their ability," he said. "Many of the Dodger ball players could be earning more money with any other ball club."

Major League Teams To Aid Sandlotters

New York, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler has enlisted the support of at least 10 major league clubs to play exhibition games this summer for one of his prize projects—the kids who play ball on America's sandlots.

Quietly, but with considerable determination, Chandler has pushed his program, and it is possible that before the regular major league season begins all of the major league teams will arrange benefit games for youngsters in their cities.

A United Press check of major league teams today revealed that the world champion Cleveland Indians will play the Brooklyn Dodgers, the New York Yankees will meet the New York Giants, the Detroit Tigers will oppose the Cincinnati Reds, the Washington Nationals will play the Pittsburgh Pirates, and the Philadelphia Athletics will play the Philadelphia Phillies in benefit exhibition games.

Catholic Loses To Sho'men

Chestertown, Md., Feb. 23 (AP).—Washington College grabbed an early lead and held on to defeat Catholic University, 49-42, tonight in a Mason-Dixon Conference basketball game.

The victory enabled the Eastern Shore club to retain a mathematical chance of making the league playoffs next week in Washington. It was their sixth triumph in 13 loop outings.

Kent Sullivan scored on a set shot and Nick Scallion tallied three field goals in quick succession to provide Washington with an 8-2 lead shortly after the game got under way.

The closest Catholic U could make it after that was 34-32 near the end of the third period, but the Sho'men pulled away.

Thirty-nine points of the victors' total were racked up by Sullivan and Scallion, with the latter getting the evening's highest total, 24.

3 Women Pin Managers Help Success of Post's Tournament

Although it's generally believed that a woman's place is in the home, this isn't true in the case of Helen Vassallo. Evelyn Gay and Mary Graves, managers of local bowling alleys who are helping to make the Third Annual Washington Post Tournament for the benefit of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club a smashing success.

Mrs. Vassallo is manager of the Fort Davis alleys, where her husband, Larry, is proprietor. Mrs. Gay holds forth at Takoma, while Mrs. Graves is owner-manager of the Petworth mapleways on Georgia ave. It's unusual for a woman to be a bowling manager, but this trio has set something of a national record. Arville Ebersole, executive secretary of the National Duckin Bowling Congress, says that no other city can boast of three feminine managers.

Mrs. Graves succeeded her husband, Vernon, after he died last spring. Mrs. Gay has been at Takoma for several years, while Mrs. Vassallo took over a few seasons back. Mrs. Vassallo bowls in several leagues, while her other feminine contemporaries also are quite proficient duckpiners.

The Post tournament, held in cooperation with the Metropolitan Washington Duckpin Operators' Association, continued at brisk pace, with good scores reported at all alleys. The Women's Auxiliary of the Police Boys Club is helping to secure entries. Mrs. Robert C. Barrett, wife of the Superintendent of Police, and Mrs. Hugh House joined Officer Ralph H. Fries at Penn Recreation Center to assist in entries there. Penn's entries have soared past 700.

American Bows To Penn State

State College, Pa., Feb. 23 (AP).—Penn State's basketball team rolled over a zone defense tonight to score a 63-50 victory and even the season's series with American University of Washington, D. C. It was State's fifth win, American U's seventh defeat.

The Eagles, triumphant over the Lions in an early season meeting, were never in the running after the first 15 minutes as Milt Simon equaled an individual Penn State scoring record by collaring 23 points. Ron Garshag of Washington, D. C., was high for the visitors with 10 points.

Press Strategy Beats Radio, 20-15

Superior bench strategy allowed the Sportswriters to defeat the Radio Announcers, 20-15, last night in a prelim to the Georgetown-George Washington game at the Armory.

For three quarters, the Scribes' Brian Trust lured their opponents into believing the Mighty Haight was not around. The Radio guys were leading, 15-13, with less than five minutes to go and appeared ready to sign off as winners.

At this point, however, Haight sneaked from behind the hot dog stand, whipped off his apron, rushed on the floor and promptly stuck his finger in Dutch Bergman's eye.

The referee yelled "foul." Haight protested that he was unable to keep up with Bergman so, on instructions from the bench, was trying to hypnotize him and it seems Dutch didn't get the point . . . the only point made by Haight.

AFTER HAIGHT put the finger on him, Bergman had to go back to general managing the Armory, and the game, to all intents and purposes—a masterful way of putting it—was over.

Johnny (AP) Scali sank two baskets, Jack (Post) Walsh sank one field goal and Carroll (Times-Herald Hall sank one foul and Haight simply sank.

It's probably best that the best team won because the Sportswriters most certainly would have protested.

The Radio line-up included more ringers than were seen in the National Horseshoe Pitching Finals and featured such well-known adlibbers as Curley White and Phil Fox, who have been featured locally on the whistle network.

Steve (NBC) Douglass was the only Radio Guy to play the whole game. Bob (WINX-WTTG) Wolff did well, but left after the first half to telecast the Caps game, which proves those Tongue Twisters will sell out for a few lousy bucks.

All in all, a good time, was had by all—all except Dutch Bergman who said, "Basketball is OK, I guess but I just can't see it." Probably next year, with both eyes open again, he will have a different slant.

Penn Rallies to Wallop Navy in Overtime, 67 to 52

Quakers Get 17 Points in Extra Period

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 23 (AP).—Phil Harman dunked in a 2-pointer in the last four seconds of the regulation game to tie the score and then led a Pennsylvania surge in the overtime for a 67-52 triumph over the Navy basketball team today.

The Middies apparently had sewed up the ball game with a 48-40 lead with only 2½ minutes to play. But Penn caught fire then to knot the count and the spree carried over into the extra period.

Bob Carlson set the stage for Harman's tying goal with a 2-pointer 17 seconds before the end of the regular four periods. Harman's shot from underneath made the score 50-50.

He then collaborated with big Herb Lyon to lead the Quakers in scoring 17 straight points before Dave Mullaney tallied Navy's only basket in the 5-minute overtime. Harman scored four goals and Lyon three in the extra period.

Harman wound up with 19 points to top all scorers while Lyon and Willie Wilson of Navy each garnered 17.

Penn, chalking up its eleventh win in 18 games, converted 13 of its 16 foul tries. It was the eighth setback in 19 games for Navy.

Dartmouth Hopes Army In 2 Overtimes, 61-58

West Point, N. Y., Feb. 23 (AP).—Dartmouth fought off a stubborn Army quintet today to gain a 61-58 basketball victory in two overtimes.

Navy Plebes Beat GW Frosh, 60-53

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 23 (AP).—The Navy Plebe basketball team won its eleventh game of the season today with a 60-43 overtime victory over the George Washington Freshmen.

The Washington quintet forced the extra period after overcoming a 29-23 halftime deficit. With one minute of the regulation time remaining, GW's Ed Taylor sank a free throw to tie the score at 51. In the overtime, Navy's Dick Smith converted a free throw and put the Plebes ahead to stay.

St. John's, Gonzaga Clash for Catholic Title Tonight

Cadets Are Unbeaten in Loop Play

The biggest crowd of the scholastic basketball season is expected tonight at College Park where St. John's and Gonzaga clash, with the Catholic High title at stake.

Advance sale of tickets is more than 2200, and most of the 4500 seats are expected to be taken at the 8:30 starting time.

St. John's, in first place with a 7-0 record, can clinch the title for the third straight year by winning.

Gonzaga's only loop loss came in its meeting with St. John's earlier this year, 33-27. Otherwise, it has won 7 league games.

Against league and nonleague competition, Gonzaga has a 21-2 record, compared to 20-3 for St. John's. However, St. John's has played a tougher schedule, and numbers among its victims Central, Eastern, Wilson, Coolidge, Western and Charlotte Hall. Gonzaga's biggest victories were over Priory and Montgomery-Blair, one of the teams that has beaten St. John's.

Leading Gonzaga tonight will be Jim (Tippy) Larkins, 6-foot 1-inch forward, who has a 15-point average, and scored 11 in the last St. John's game. Don Kokes, who has averaged 13 points for St. John's, is Larkins' counterpart, and scored 10 in the last Gonzaga game.

Berg, Revolta Bow in Golf

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 23 (AP).—Favored teams, with the exception of Patty Berg and Johnny Revolta, advanced in the first round of the international mixed two-ball golf tournament here today.

Miss Berg of Fulith, Minn., and Revolta of Evanston, Ill., were eliminated in a mild upset by Gene Hopkins of Cleveland and Herb Minert of Gary, Ind., one-up in 19 holes.

The defending champions, Peggy Kirk of Findlay, Ohio, and Carl Dann, jr., of Orlando, defeated Eleanor Allen of Deland and Eddie Kirkland, Stetson University student, 4 and 3.

Among other results:

Mildred (Babe) Zaharias, Denver, and Walter Roman, Five Farms, Md., defeated Mary Sargent, Pebble Beach, Calif., and Bernie Powers, Orlando, 3 and 2.

Mrs. Maurice Glick, Baltimore, and Bill Goldbeck, Mount Kisco, N. Y., defeated Mrs. Eddie Bush, Hammond, Ind., and Stan Kosloski, Rumford, R. I., 2 and 1.

Bettye Mims White, Dallas, and Denny Champagne, Orlando, defeated Button Cosgrove, Southern Pines, N. C., and Herman Worsham, Washington, 5 and 4.

Fox's Apology Lifts Ring Ban

Cleveland, Feb. 23 (AP).—The Cleveland Boxing Commission reversed itself today and nullified a 30-day suspension imposed last night on Blackjack Billy Fox, Philadelphia light heavyweight.

Fox provided a special ending to his schedule 10-round fight with Dick Wagner of Portland, Oreg., after Referee Don Gonzales stopped the bout in the ninth round and awarded Wagner a technical knockout. At the time, Fox was on the floor for the fourth time. He raised himself to his wobbly legs and made for Wagner and the referee while the cops started climbing into the ring.

The commission's change of heart was brought about by Fox's apology to the 9149 arena customers and the desire of both Fox and Wagner to settle the issue in a 15-round match. The return bout has been set for March 10.

Fox weighed 173 in last night's scrap against Wagner's 171. The gross gate was announced as $33,164.

Charlie Hall In Demand by W-L Teams

Charlie Hall, Washington-Lee sophomore athlete, is in heavy demand this weekend.

Track Coach Harry Deming thinks Charlie can win the high jump at Saturday morning's Southern Conference meet, high school section, at Chapel Hill, N. C.

And Basketball Coach Frank Rockwell needs Charlie's 10-point average Friday night when W-L plays Lane of Charlottesville for a berth in the Virginia State tournament.

It makes no difference to Charlie which team he helps this weekend. But he obviously can't compete for both because the game and meet take place 250 miles and only a few hours apart.

So the two coaches will huddle this morning to decide which will have Charlie on his team.

The Arlington school and George Washington and Episcopal of Alexandria, dominant in last year's meet, are making return trips Saturday.

Fifteen high and prep schools are entered, and five events are planned. Defending champion GW and runnerup W-L will furnish four of last year's five winners in return appearances. The fifth, GW's hurdler, George McDonald, is a freshman at Duke.

Bobby Jones, who holds the meet's 1000-yard run record of 2:17, will be back to defend his title, and so will his teammate, Bill Dudrow, a high jumper.

Matt Byrd, who won the 60-yard sprint in 1948, heads W-L's entry list. Eddie Fowler, veteran of the winning mile-relay team, runs the first quarter again for W-L Saturday. He'll be followed by Dan Henshaw, Paul Quigg and Steve Dakes, all newcomers.

Episcopal, the third-place team, is favored to crash into the winner's circle in the hurdles event with long John Dilweg, last year's runnerup, entered.—Herb Heft.

Terps Play Richmond Tonight

Maryland, needing two out of their remaining three games to clinch a berth in the Southern Conference tournament at Durham, N. C., March 3, 4 and 5, will meet the University of Richmond at Richmond tonight. Maryland now has a 6-6 record in conference play and has to meet Virginia Military Institute and their area rivals from George Washington yet.

Byers Awarded Mat Decision

June Byers pinned Dot Dotson in 15 minutes in the feature event on last night's wrestling program for the benefit of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club. One of the largest crowds of the season saw the Dallas, Texas, girl win with a body press.

On the supporting card, Chief Little Wolf defeated Ivan Kamaroff with an Indian death lock in 25 minutes. Nanjo Singh won in 19 minutes when Wilbur Mead was disqualified, and Marvin Mercer and Kram Kudo went to a 30-minute draw.

Terps to Play 12 Tennis Matches

Coach Doyle Royall yesterday released a 12-meet schedule for the University of Maryland tennis team.

The schedule (home meets unless otherwise stated):

April 2, Colgate; 5, at Loyola; 8, at Quantico (Va.) Marines; 12, at Georgetown; 21, William and Mary; 27, George Washington; 29, Temple.

May 4, Davidson; 5, at Washington and Lee; 11, at North Carolina State; 13-14, Southern Conference Tournament; 17, at Johns Hopkins; 23, Virginia.

Hoya Intramural Program Keeps Becker on the Move

While the drive for the $800,000 McDonough Memorial Gymnasium lags, more than 600 Georgetown students are playing round-the-clock basketball in ancient Ryan gym.

Because it has room for only one game at a time, the 44-team intramural league plays three contests every night and all day Saturday and Sunday.

Genial George Becker, 36-year-old director of physical education is the man behind the comprehensive intramural sports program that attracts an estimated 85 per cent of the 1500 students eligible.

In addition to basketball, it includes a 36-team touch football league; 50-team softball league and competition in track, swimming and tennis.

Becker, who teaches 20 classes a week, finds time to keep voluminous statistics on intramural affairs. In addition, he edits Georgetown programs, and is self-appointed historian of varsity athletics.

George, football and track man before he was graduated from Georgetown in 1934, really enjoys the interest and excitement of the intra-student sports.

Voyles Joins Baseball Bums

Brooklyn, Feb. 23 (AP).—The newly created Brooklyn-New York combine in the All-American Football Conference began operating officially today with the announcement of a new corporate setup that moves Carl Voyles, erstwhile head coach of the Dodgers, out of the gridiron picture.

This was disclosed at a press conference at which Dan Topping, president of the baseball Yankees, was announced as the president of the football club. Under the new arrangement, Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn club will be chairman of the board of directors.

The position of Voyles, who has served only one year of his three-year contract, is still in doubt, although Rickey made it clear the pact will be honored.

Holguin Wins, Worsham 4th

Mexico City, Feb. 23 (AP).—Tony Holguin, a 22-year-old Guadalajara, Mexico, professional, outstroked some of the United States' leading golfers today in winning the Mexican Open tournament with a 12-under-par 201 for 54 holes.

He had rounds of 66-69-66 over the par 71 Chapultepec Golf Club course.

The young shoemaker, a native of San Antonio, Tex., finished six strokes better than Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., who was second with 207.

Jimmy Demaret of Oaji, Calif., ranking money winner of United States pros, had a 208.

Holguin led throughout the two-day tournament over the 6285-yard layout.

This is his first major victory, although he played in eight PGA Open tournaments in the United States last year.

Lew Worsham of Washington, D. C., finished fourth with 211, followed by George Fazio of Norristown, Pa., and Ed (Porky) Oliver of Seattle, Wash., each with 213.

Holguin's first prize money amounted to $2000.

Bell Wins, 42-35

Paced by Gene Meleto's 19 points, Bell's varsity yesterday defeated Landon's Jayvees 42-35 on the winners' court.

Roger Kingsbury Scores 45 Points In St. Albans Win

Baltimore, Feb. 23 (AP).—Roger Kingsbury of St. Albans, Washington, outscored the opposition singlehanded today in a 63-38 basketball victory over Boys' Latin.

The 6-foot, 4-inch center tallied 45 points in the 32 minutes of play. He hit for 19 baskets and 7 free throws. He has averaged 26.5 points in 10 games.

MEMO

TO: The Congress of the United States

FROM: Modern Industry

SUBJECT: The new labor law

The men who manage America's industries want just one result to come from the current debate over a new labor law. That one result is industrial peace.

Their position has been widely misrepresented. They've been pictured as wanting a law that will help them smash unions. They've also been quoted as considering the Taft-Hartley Act extreme and unworkable.

Neither statement is accurate. Progressive management men know that good labor relations are born of cooperation, not conflict. They know that the law that is best for the public as a whole is best for them. They don't want a pro-management law any more than they want a pro-union law. They want a pro-public law.

To them a pro-public law means a workable law. They want to keep in the new law those important features of the Taft-Hartley Act that have worked.

The editors of Modern Industry, the magazine for progressive management men, define the thinking of these men in the following editorial from the February 15th issue. It details the kind of fair labor law the alert, progressive managers of American industry ask for:

MANAGEMENT NEEDS A "PRO-PUBLIC" LABOR LAW—WORKABLE, PRACTICAL, IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST

The Wagner Act is what employers called a "pro-labor law." The Taft-Hartley Act is what unions call a "pro-company law." What this country needs now is a law that both management and labor can come to accept as "pro-public." This is the only kind of law management needs—and the only kind of law for which it should fight.

Neither the Wagner Act nor the Taft-Hartley Act can properly be called a failure. Both were products of the times under which they were enacted.

The Wagner Act encouraged collective bargaining when this method was young and far from accepted by many employers. It succeeded in establishing collective bargaining as an accepted part of democratic capitalism.

The Taft-Hartley Act was passed after a year in which a record crop of 4,985 strikes cost the U. S. 116 million man-days of production. In its first full year of operation, it helped to reduce the strike total to 3,300, with the loss of only 34 million man-days—without slowing union growth.

Now the Congress is beginning to write still another set of rules for labor-management relations. The legislators must cut through Election results, advice, and propaganda sufficiently to realize one plain and simple fact. The first wish of all the people is a law that will expand the area of industrial peace and steadily cut down industrial disputes. This time, there is no urge to punish labor or restrict management. The public wants industrial peace; and both management and unions need peace.

With this single objective in view, the editors of MI have tried to construct the pattern for a new law—a realistic compromise between the extreme views attributed to labor and management, that could be passed by the Congress, and that all parties could endorse with sincerity. These suggestions do not attempt to represent the ideal—from any point of view. Unless management, particularly, is willing to make reasonable compromises with its philosophic ideal and try to work out the best possible law under current circumstances, the nature of the political climate assures a very bad law indeed.

A workable new law can be constructed around six universally acceptable guideposts. The parts of the new law can be selected from the raw material to be found in the Wagner and Taft-Hartley Acts as they are consistent with these requirements. To achieve a growing atmosphere of industrial peace, the U. S. Government must:

1. Check the excesses of organized labor without destroying its rights or the security of its unions.

Jurisdictional strikes should be outlawed, so that the progress made in curbing them under T-H can continue. Secondary boycotts, through which innocent bystanders to labor-disputes are made to suffer, should be banned—with the specific exception that the provision cannot be used to force employees of one plant to take over work from another that is struck. Union leadership must not be allowed to substitute force—physically coercive picketing—for persuasion as a means of maintaining a legal strike. Contracts between labor and management, arrived at through collective bargaining, must be enforceable by both parties. The ineffective T-H antifeatherbedding provisions should be strengthened. No one of the abuses mentioned are legitimate union weapons—or promote industrial peace.

On the other hand, certain of the Taft-Hartley provisions in this area were punitive rather than constructive. The clause artificially encouraging a return to craft-unionism serves only to disturb existing peaceful and mature relationships. The denial of voting rights in NLRB elections to strikers who have been replaced by others is an invitation to strike-breaking. Curbing the use of union funds for political purposes is obviously partisan.

The union shop is justifiable for protection of worker and union, but the closed shop is a monopoly—out of place in our society, no longer needed, and an invitation to abuse.

2. Check excesses of employers without destroying their rights and the ability to manage their own businesses.

Time-tested Wagner Act rules of employer behavior—requiring bargaining in good faith, banning company unions, and prohibiting discrimination against union members or activity—should be retained. Furthermore, two T-H provisions that weakened these rules should be dropped. The newly won employer right to petition for NLRB elections is subject to serious abuse because it can be used to stifle legitimate unionism and has little potential value. It is reasonable to prohibit supervisors and supervised from belonging to the same union, but foremen, organized separately, should have the same protection under the law as other employees.

Several other T-H additions, however, seem wholly legitimate. The employer's right to speak his mind on labor matters should be maintained. The authority to discharge employees for cause, as controlled by Wagner Act curbs, is a minimum prerogative of management. Employers must keep the right to petition NLRB to correct labor abuses, and, despite inadvisability of so doing, to sue for performance of contract. Labor has these rights, and no fair law should deny them to the other party.

3. Protect the country from crippling strikes that endanger health, security, or welfare.

Control of national emergency strikes by injunction must be continued. Mediation Service experience suggests it be strengthened by (a) speeding up negotiations through shortening the "cooling-off" period; (b) allowing the President to invoke the emergency powers on his own responsibility; and (c) permitting the public board of inquiry to make specific recommendations.

4. Actively promote industrial peace by encouraging and aiding the employment of the collective-bargaining process.

Of first importance is the continued independence of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. The Labor Dept. can't be both an advocate of labor's interests and supervise an impartial umpiring service between labor and management. The T-H requirement that unions bargain in good faith must stay in the new law. The anti-Communist affidavit, hard to swallow on philosophical grounds, has had useful results. Employers should have no objection to its application to them.

5. Protect individual workers against union excesses.

Individual union members should have every possible means to control their own leadership. Right of individual petition to the NLRB, including the right of 30% of plant employees to an election to try to get rid of the existing union, must stay — accompanied by protection for the petitioner from union reprisal. Freedom to take grievances directly to employers, if desired, should not be interfered with.

Employers should not be asked to watch over union welfare funds. It would be more effective to empower the Dept. of Labor both to advise on and inspect administration of funds.

The provision against unreasonable dues and assessments should not be needed; union members must assume the responsibility of protecting themselves. Elections prior to union-shop certification have proved unnecessary. Far more useful would be a requirement of annual secret-ballot elections in the individual unions.

6. Provide for impartial administration of the law and for a separate judicial body to which employers, employees, and unions can go with their legitimate grievances.

Space is lacking to discuss the complications of NLRB organization, but there are minimum requirements. Prosecution and judicial functions should remain separate. The right of appeal, largely removed in the T-H Act, should be strengthened. The NLRB must remain independent outside of the Labor Dept., and the quality of staff personnel should be improved.

These six guideposts for Congressional action have been extended in considerable detail because the final bill must necessarily be a collection of detailed and complicated provisions. Only if antilabor and antiboss platitudes are replaced by specific, pro-public arguments will the parts of the whole add up to these requirements for the advancement of industrial peace.

The editors, speaking both for and to Modern Industry's management readers, present their suggestions in this spirit and for that purpose.

Budget Bureau Permits U. S. Employe Increase Of 6217 in 4th Quarter

Federal agencies will continue to expand during the fourth quarter of this fiscal year, which begins on April 1. The Budget Bureau has permitted a net increase of 6217 employes in that three-month period. It set an over-all ceiling of 1,982,795 on Federal jobs in its jurisdiction.

The big increases were allowed for the Army, Air Force, Agriculture and Interior, seasonal employes for the latter two. The major reduction will hit Postoffice, which must have 16,448 fewer jobs. Other reductions are: Veterans Administration, 3950; Maritime, 2150, and Selective Service, 1050.

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT WHITNEY is a good bet to resign soon as Assistant Secretary of the Air Force. He's reported to have the inside track to be Undersecretary of the Commerce Department.

GEORGE H. FIELD has his resignation in as commissioner of the Bureau of Community Facilities. He will leave March 4 to become associated with the Dahlman Construction Co. of Milwaukee at a much better salary than Uncle Sam pays him. It's the old, old story of Government losing able people to industry. His successor at the Federal Works Agency will be PERE F. SEWARD.

JAMES SCOTT will retire next Monday as assistant chief of Budget Bureau's important estimates division. He's a top-notch career employe. Scott began his Federal career in 1910 as a $90-a-month clerk in the Forest Service at Famine City, Idaho, but he had to pay only $20 a month for room, board, and laundry. He saved about as much then as he does now. Scott spent 28 years with the Forest Service before he joined the Budget 11 years ago.

EXPORT CONTROL: The ax is hanging over the heads of about 150 employes in this Commerce office. The agency is doing what it can to have the jobs continued. This is the story:

Now that export control has been continued by law beyond February 28, the agency needs only $1,175,000 to maintain its present force of about 750 employes until July 1 (Incidentally, the Budget Bureau rejected a request for a big expansion of the office.) But the House voted only one million dollars.

If the House figure stands, the big layoff will have to be made because the agency will be required to pay the cost of accumulated annual leave and the $330 pay raise out of its dwindling funds. A substantially larger number of employes will have to be fired in order to balance the agency's books. The Senate will be asked to restore the cut.

NOTES: Chairman Murray of the House Civil Service Committee has introduced the Administration's bill to raise postal rates . . . The Displaced Career Employes Association is supporting a bill that would force Federal agencies to hire the DCEs for jobs they could qualify for. The agencies would be forbidden from hiring, promoting or transfering people until the DCEs were hired . . . Jobs: Treasury enforcement agent jobs here and in nearby States, $3727 to $4479, and scientific administrator, $6235 to $10,305. Apply for the examinations at Civil Service fourth regional office here.

LOYALTY: The AFL's Philadelphia local of the National Federation of Post Office Clerks is on record for abolition of the Federal employe loyalty program. It demands that suspected employes be charged and tried under Civil Service rules and "regular" procedure. The local is up in arms over the suspension of William D. Ridgeway, a postal clerk of 28 years' experience. In wires to Pennsylvania members of Congress, it charges that Ridgeway's suspension "is a travesty on justice comparable in a small way to the judicial crime being perpetrated in Hungary."

GAO: Friends of Comptroller General Lindsay Warren insist that he's not opposed to a reorganization of his General Accounting Office—if it's ordered by the Congress. But they concede that he will resist any recommendation by the Hoover Commission that would tamper with his agency.

Warren points out that GAO is a congressional agency and the Hoover Commission has no business saying a word about it, either directly or indirectly. It happens, of course, that GAO's work is Government-wide in scope, and that a reorganization of Government could properly be conducted unless the accounting function was considered.

The Comptroller would give the President authority to reorganize all executive agencies. In fact, he makes a dramatic appeal for the reorganization of the other fellow. But that seems to be routine in this city.

American U. Slates Local History Talk

"Problems of Local History in the District of Columbia" will be the topic of an open meeting at 8:30 p. m. today at American University, 1901 F st. nw. Dr. Constance McLaughlin Green, chief historian of the Army Ordnance Department, will be the speaker at the meeting, which is open to the public.

PUC Lifts Ban Against Conversion To Gas Heat

Utility Firm Asked End of Curb Due To Added Supply Of Natural Fuel

A ban on conversion of coal and oil heating systems to gas, imposed by the District Public Utilities Commission last February, was lifted last night as a result of increased natural gas supplies.

The PUC received a request Monday from the Washington Gas Light Co. for a lifting of the ban since "it believes it will be able to furnish gas for heating purposes in the winter of 1949-50 without limitation."

The firm asked, however, that "because there is not an unlimited supply of gas available," it should be kept informed of installation of gas-heating equipment to replace or supplement units using other fuels.

The commission lifted the emergency limitation yesterday and ordered that replacement and supplemental gas-heating units "shall be registered with the company within five days after such installation." If not registered, "the company shall not be obligated to supply gas to such equipment."

The emergency order was imposed February 27, 1948, after the gas company reported a heavy call for gas as home and building owners converted from coal and oil because of shortages and rising prices.

The ban did not affect installation of gas-heating systems in new buildings except where extra large boilers or furnaces with gas input of more than 500,000 BTU an hour were planned.

Gas Company Admits Causing One Oil Slick

Officials of the Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday admitted responsibility for oil seepage in one case yesterday as the District government continued its efforts to prevent oil slick on the Anacostia River.

After an office hearing, Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert C. Chalfonte gave the gas company until Tuesday to forfeit $100 collateral or else face trial for the seepage which occurred February 18.

Chalfonte pointed to a local law forbidding any waterfront property owner to permit petroleum products to flow from his land into the rivers. The waterfront owner is responsible whether or not the oil flow originated on his land, it was said.

Oil soaked land in the vicinity of fuel plants near the river has long been a problem here. Last year, police reported that more than a mile of the Anacostia was covered with heavy oil slick.

However, steps taken, including closing off a water pipe leak which had caused much of the oil to exude from the ground, have reduced the problem, according to Harbor Police Corpl. David G. Matthews.

But, according to boat and dock owners, it springs up anew after each heavy rain.

Both the gas company and the L. A. Steuart Co., which have oil lines along the waterfront deny that their lines are leaking.

So far, District officials have been unable to determine by chemical analysis and physical tests the source of the trouble.

Man Freed on $500 Bond in Numbers Case

Arlington police yesterday arrested Chester C. White, 35,, of 3149 S. Quinn st., on a charge of operating a numbers game and released him in $500 bond for a hearing in Arlington County Court March 1.

White was picked up by Detectives Louis Elliott and Jack Conway in his car in the 2700 block of Washington blvd. The detectives, who said they had been watching White for "some time," said they found numbers slips and about $50 in cash on him.

Indian Woman at Maryland U. Studying to Aid Her People

The Washington Post

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

The distance from a crowded prison in New Delhi to the spacious campus of the University of Maryland is only as great as the determination of a small, sari-garbed woman named Urmila Johri.

It's not half a world as the ships roll, nor a few years in time. The distance has no measurement for 36-year-old Mrs. Johri other than being a short interlude in a large plan.

Part of that plan finds her listening these days to feature-writing lectures in the university's journalism department.

The better she learns to write, the better will her message appeal to the persons she hopes eventually to reach—the natives of India.

Plans to Teach in India

Her large plan is simply to return to India and teach subjects like civics, hygiene, home economics.

Mrs. Johri, wife of a major in the Indian army, has been another kind of teacher.

For nine years she taught modern and classical languages. She holds a master's degree from Agra University.

When she returns home in a year and a half, she hopes to have earned a doctorate in education from Maryland University.

To gain it, she's studying community organization, rural sociology, Latin American education, adolescent education, and feature writing.

An Underground Leader

Mrs. Johri arrived in the United States six weeks ago. The decision to study at Maryland, close to the Nation's Capital, crystallized with her experiences as an underground leader in the movement for Indian independence, as did her desire to bring education to the Indian masses.

She spent two months in Delhi district jail as a result of her independence activities.

"I was detained," she says, "because they thought I was taking part in subversive activities—and I was. But they couldn't find it out."

"They," she explains, were British officials who were attempting to put down the movement.

Mrs. Johri plans to set up with possible financial aid from the Indian National Congress "up-to-date adult education centers" around New Delhi.

Citizens Favor County School Budget Boost

Nearly 150 citizens who attended an Arlington School Board budget hearing last night voted informally in favor of increasing a proposed $3,065,156 school budget by at least $335,000.

The vote came in a show of hands, with only a half dozen going up for the $3,065,156 budget suggested by Assistant School Superintendent Charles J. Walsh.

The school board must prepare its official budget for the Arlington County Board, which eventually must give its approval.

In last night's session at the Thomas Jefferson Junior High School, School Board Chairman Barnard Joy estimated the $3,065,156 budget would require the equivalent of a 50-cent county tax increase.

He said the present 1948-49 budget is costing the equivalent of $1.41 for every $100 of assessed valuation.

No hands were shown when the chairman asked who would support a $2,800,000 budget; only scattered hands for a $3,200,000 budget; but a majority favored a budget of $3,400,000 or higher.

Asked whether he thought the county board would approve even the three-million-dollar budget, Chairman Joy said: "We are as much in the dark as you are."

Last year, the county board drastically cut the estimates submitted to it by the school board.

Mrs. Carolyn E. Planck, a member of the Arlington League of Women Voters, urged parents at last night's meeting to "turn out at the county board hearing and fight for a budget we really need."

Firemen Soon Quell Blazes In Two Hotels

Fires broke out in two major Washington hotels yesterday morning, but firemen quelled them within a matter of minutes.

A blaze at about 3:30 a. m. in a fifth-floor utility closet at the Hamilton Hotel, 14th and K sts. nw., routed about 30 guests from their rooms, including AFL President William Green and Representative Wagner (D., Ohio).

Firemen had the flames out in five minutes.

At about 9:50 a. m. they were called to the Sheraton Hotel, 15th and L sts. nw. A wastepaper basket, a chair and drapes were aflame. The fire was quickly extinguished.

During 1948

Airport Used By 1,186,676 Passengers

A total of 1,186,676 airline passengers got on and off planes at Washington National Airport in 1948, the Civil Aeronautics Administration announced yesterday.

This is the airport's second biggest year of passenger traffic since it opened in June, 1941. In 1946, passenger traffic totaled 1,230,480.

Aircraft arrivals and departures at National Airport numbered 158,120 during 1948. In 1946 airplane traffic there was recorded at 180,690 and in 1947 at 159,690.

A sharp drop in the number of local flights, originating here, was evident in a breakdown of the National Airport traffic figures, with 17,324 local flights listed for 1947 and only 5406 such flights recorded in 1948.

Ben Stern, aviation information director for CAA, said the reason for the drop was that "Sunday fliers" have been drawn from the heavily used National Airport to smaller fields, better equipped to handle them.

Cold Keeps Acheson Away From Office

Secretary of State Acheson was kept away from his office yesterday by a cold. The State Department announced that his weekly conference, usually held on Wednesday, has been postponed until Friday.

Teachers Pay Proposals to Be Reviewed

House Subcommittee To Consider Plans For Adjustment Of Pay Schedules

A Capitol conference yesterday reopened the question of whether Washington school teachers should get a salary boost of $200, $330, or some other adjustment of their pay.

Immediate upshot of the conference was a call for a meeting of the House District Fiscal Affairs Subcommittee at 10:30 a. m. today to review the teacher pay question.

In yesterday's conference were Representatives Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), chairman, and George J. Bates (R., Mass.), ranking minority member of the fiscal subcommittee, and Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of District schools.

No Decision Reached

Other than the call for today's meeting, the conference produced no decision on the pay question, but there were strong indications that efforts would be made to hike the $200 pay increase figure previously recommended by three House District subcommittees.

Dr. Corning appealed strongly in hearings for the $330 pay boost for teachers and other school employes covered by the teachers' pay act. He said that with present salaries he couldn't get the teachers the schools need, and couldn't keep those it has.

Despite his plea, the three subcommittees—those in charge of fiscal affairs, educational matters, and police legislation—agreed to recommend a $200 pay boost for teachers, and a $330 pay boost for police and firemen. The pay increases would be retroactive to last July when Federal employes were granted a $330 raise.

Full Committee Must Act

The plan for giving teachers $200 and police and firemen $330 has not yet been presented to the full House District Committee. Thus, if the fiscal group favored boosting the $200 figure, it could back an amendment of the figure when the pay bill does come up for action in the full District committee.

Earlier this week Representative Bates suggested the possibility of considering some revision in the present system of automatic annual increases for teachers, proposing as a posible solution that they might be allowed 10 $150 increases instead of the present 15 $100 increases in their progress up the pay scales.

This suggestion has now been offset by information supplied to the conference that other major cities have even longer periods than Washington's 15 years for moving teachers from the bottom to the top of the pay scales.

Present Washington pay scales for teachers with a bachelor's degree start at $2500 a year and end at $4000 a year; for those with master's degree the scale starts at $3000 and ends at $4500.

D. C. 18th in Pay

Figures previously submitted by Dr. Corning showed that the average teacher's salary in Washington is now $3486. This places Washington eighteenth on a list of 20 major cities in average salary.

He said the $330 increase would move Washington up to ninth place in average salary paid.

In the same list, the $330 increase would move Washington from ninth to second place in the minimum salary for teachers with a bachelor's degree; from nineteenth to fourteenth place in the maximum for teachers with a bachelor's degree; from third to first place in starting salary for teachers with a master's degree, and from twelfth to sixth place in the maximum for teachers with a master's degree.

In another executive meeting yesterday, the House and Senate Fiscal Subcommittees continued their work on the proposed District sales tax bill, reached no final decision on details, and adjourned to continue their work at 1:30 p. m. today.

Officials See Dark School Outlook Here

School officials reported on the "state of the school budget" last night, and found the situation dark for District children.

Hobart M. Corning, Superintendent of Schools, told 30 representatives of parent-teacher associations and civic groups, meeting at the Thomson School, that the proposed budget for 1950 is "not at all realistic."

The $23,323,450 request now before Congress does not include needed new buildings nor teachers, Corning said. School officials were prevented from asking for what they really need by order of the Commissioners, because of the financial plight of the city, he said.

The school head urged the parents to support a proposal for a Federal loan to finance new construction.

He cited the recommendation of Dr. George D. Strayer for a 38-million-dollar school building program, but said the figure is low because Strayer failed to include the cost of land.

Dr. Corning said that the District is making no provision for schools for war babies who are just beginning to reach school age.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Board of Education president, told the parents that better schools will be obtained only with "insistent, continuous, intelligent public support.

"It is folly," she said, "not to realize children have got to have good schools."

Adelbert W. Heinmiller, school budget officer, broke down the budget item by item

William Tate, DAV Official, Dies of Heart Attack

William Tate, 55, national director of claims for the Disabled American Veterans, died yesterday from a heart attack.

Mr. Tate collapsed at his home, 4124 Edmunds st. nw., in late afternoon after leaving his office early to nurse a cold. He had been suffering from a heart ailment for some time.

National DAV commander in 1927, Mr. Tate served as assistant national adjutant of the organization for many years. He came to the Washington office in 1943.

Born in Mullins, S. C., he was a master sergeant and a pharmacist in World War I.

Survivors include his wife, the former Myrtle Baggett, and a brother, George Tate, Belton, S. C.

3 Women Arrested By Police Vice Squad

A raid by the Police Vice Squad on a downtown apartment about 9:30 last night resulted in the arrest of three women. A detective had gained entrance by use of a code word, police said.

Police listed the three as Jean Steed, 32, of 1420 R st. nw., charged with operating a disorderly house and vagrancy; Helen Zampini, 31, of 1212 M st. nw., and Elizabeth Hazel Hansley, 34, of 1234 Massachusetts ave. nw., both charged with vagrancy.

On Marlboro Pike

Boy, 11, Dies After Auto Hits Bicycle

An 11-year-old boy was killed yesterday in Forestville, Md., when an automobile struck the bicycle he was riding on the Marlboro pike at Brown's Station rd.

The boy was Edwin F. Smith of Route 1, Upper Marlboro, whose body, according to Prince Georges County police, was thrown 34 feet from the point of impact.

William R. Spencer, 23, of 3238 13th st. nw., a bricklayer employed at Andrews Air Force Base, listed as driver of the car, was charged with manslaughter and released in $500 bond for a hearing at 10 a. m. March 4 in Upper Marlboro Police Court.

The accident occurred about 4 p. m. Police Pvt. Charles Nalley said Spencer told him and Pvt. Vincent Free that he was traveling between 30 and 35 miles an hour when the boy pedaled his bicycle onto the pike without looking.

Nalley said the boy's head apparently struck the car's door handle, breaking the handle off. The boy was taken to Casualty Hospital by the District Heights Rescue Squad and was pronounced dead on arrival. The body was removed to the District morgue.

The boy made his home with his grandfather, John L. Moore, of Forestville. Police were unable to locate his parents, Edwin F. and Margie Smith, who, they reported, are separated.

Woman Badly Hurt As Auto Hits Pole

A 28-year-old woman was seriously injured about 5:30 p. m. yesterday when the automobile in which she was riding crashed into a light pole at Foxhall rd. and Garfield st. nw.

The woman, Mrs. Paul W. Buchanan, 4429 Wisconsin ave. nw., was admitted to Georgetown Hospital with possible fractures of the skull, right wrist and upper and lower jaws. In addition several teeth were knocked out and her scalp and face were cut.

According to police, the automobile driven by her husband, a butcher, ran over a curb and skidded into the pole, severing it at the base. Buchanan was charged with driving at unreasonable speed and released under $300 bond.

In another accident, at 4:30 p. m. Hugh Rich, 76, of 1619 L st. nw., was injured when he reportedly walked into the side of an automobile as he was leaving a loading platform at 15th and H sts. nw. He was admitted to Emergency Hospital with a possible fractured left leg and injuries to the left hip and shoulder.

Police said Rich collided with the side of an automobile driven by Joseph H. Slater, 45, of 6219 19th st. N., Arlington. Slater was not charged.

Firm Allowed To Withdraw Bid On Gallinger Job

District Commissioners yesterday excused a bidder on the new laboratory at Gallinger Hospital from executing the contract after the Comptroller General's office approved the move.

Lieut. Col. L. E. Cox, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, said the contract will be awarded shortly to the Zerzel Construction Co. of 1011 20th st. nw. on a bid of $352,775.

The excused bidder was Roystone, Grimm & Sammons, 1115 Wilson blvd., Arlington, Va., who bid $317,506 on the project, but later declared an estimator had made an error in computing costs and the bid was too low.

Club Holds Carnival

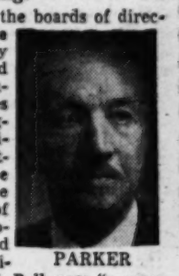
The Very Rev. Msgr. John J. Spence, director of education for the Archdiocese of Washington, has invited the public to attend a pre-Lenten carnival tonight and Friday night in the auditorium of St. Matthew's Cathedral Club, 1814 N st. nw. Carnival booths will sell linens, candy, cake, aprons, stationery, cosmetics and refreshments.

Community Chest Names C. G. Parker As President

Bell, Retiring Head, Asks More Inclusive Drive, Shortened To Three Weeks

Chauncey G. Parker, chairman of the 1949 Red Feather campaign, last night was unanimously elected president of the Community Chest Federation at its twenty-first annual meeting.

Members of the boards of directors of five Community Chests and United Community Services in the Washington metropolitan area attended the meeting at the Department of Interior auditorium and heard retiring President Daniel W. Bell urge "a more inclusive Community Chest" in the future.



PARKER

Also elected last night were 84 members of the 1949 board of directors, along with John A. Reilly, treasurer, Caesar L. Aiello, secretary, and six vice presidents, as follows:

Edgar F. Czarra, Prince Georges County; Wilbur B. Tubbs, Arlington; Arthur J. Phelan, Montgomery; Francis Palms, jr., Fairfax County; Maurice D. Rosenberg, Alexandria, and Frank R. Jelleff, United Community Services of Washington.

Defends Organization

In the president's annual report, Bell cited past accomplishments of the Community Chest and defended its organization as a "federation of contributors with varied interests and loyalties and a federation of agencies with varying constituencies."

He called for "a more inclusive Chest—a Chest that includes all campaigns"—as the answer to those who feel "we are plagued with almost a campaign a month."

"There is one valid reason for exclusion," he continued.

"That is when an agency becomes so controversial in the public mind that it affects adversely the result of the whole campaign."

Bell said he believes integration of "the responsibilities of the several staffs" of chests would make for savings without "impairing the autonomy of the Chests."

Suggests Speedup

He suggested that campaigns be speeded up, with coverage of prospects cut from eight weeks to three weeks.

Lyman S. Ford, director of health and welfare planning of Community Chests and Councils of America, exhorted Chest officials to expand their influence on a national scale.

"The record of federated financing has not been too bad with respect to local services," he said, "but very little has been done toward bringing order into the national health and welfare agency picture."

He said "the very nature" of many health and welfare problems "makes a stronger and more effective national approach to their solution more essential."

Asks Greater Cooperation

He asked for greater cooperation between "autonomous" Chest agencies and contributors' groups to develop and finance a more "adequate, efficient and coordinated program of service."

Another speaker at the meeting, Past President Frank R. Jelleff, predicted "skirmishes in the great battle between public and private housing will continue to be fought to some extent in our United Community Services."

He said the problem of continuing UCS in "one great organization in the Nation's Capital" is one that will "have a very decided effect upon similar Community Chest problems throughout the country."

The question seems to be, he added: "Shall we have two Community Chests with an iron curtain between them, or is there some way for the good of the community that we may all get together?"

Marijuana Charge

Wagstaff Once More in Toils

Joseph A. Wagstaff, 24, whose escapades have made news many times in the past five years, has run into new difficulties.

Wagstaff

Police Pvt. E. E. Merson arrested Wagstaff on drunk and disorderly conduct charges at 5:30 a. m. Tuesday, at Connecticut ave. and Calvert st. nw.

In the Eighth Precinct station, a search disclosed marijuana cigarettes in Wagstaff's possesion, police said. An additional charge of violating the Marijuana Tax Act was placed against him.

Wagstaff, who lives at 5506 Grove st., Chevy Chase, Md., paid fines totaling $20 on the drunk and disorderly conduct charges yesterday in Municipal Court.

He was taken before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence on the marijuana charge, and his case was continued until March 3. He was released in $300 bond.

At the time of his latest arrest, Wagstaff was free on $2000 bond, pending decision on his appeal against a two-year sentence to the Maryland House of Correction for assaulting his family's maid.

He was convicted in Montgomery County of attacking the maid, Mrs. Frances Tolson, 30, of 1822 15th st. nw., with a kitchen knife last December.

Wagstaff's police record dates back to 1944 when he was arrested by District police on a charge of reckless driving, after leading police a chase at 70 miles an hour.

In June, 1946, he was convicted and served a year for assault with a deadly weapon in Las Vegas, Nev. He pumped six slugs into the body of a companion.

In September, 1947, Wagstaff was wounded by a policeman after he had broken into a Chevy Chase home, which he believed to be his own, it was testified, and threatened to kill the occupants.

Wagstaff was convicted of malicious destruction of property and sentenced to 30 days. He also was convicted of assaulting a police officer, and fined $25.

During the war, Wagstaff served in the Coast Guard. He was given a medical discharge.

Area News in Brief

New Bidder Seeks Guarded Auto Lot

Top bid for a parking lot near Blair House, temporary home of the First Family, has been submitted by Federal Parking Services, of 14th and D sts. nw., it was disclosed yesterday by the Public Buildings Administration.

The lot occupies half a block on the east side of 17th st. nw. and has an opening on H st. It is located in the area behind Blair-Lee House, where the President lives, and the United States Court of Claims Building.

The bid of Federal Parking Services was $1666.66 monthly, only $15.66 more than the bid of the current lot operator, Grand Plaza Parking Corp. That lease, at $92 monthly, expires in March.

Public Buildings Administration officials said a provision in the lease requires reservation of space for cars of 116 Government employes at a monthly rental of not more than $5 each. Rates for other cars may be fixed by the operator.

The lot, which currently accommodates some 185 cars, is on what the Government calls "the most closely guarded city block in the country."

R. W. Berry, Topographic Expert, Dies

Ralph Whiteley Berry, 69, topographic engineer and map editor for the United States Geological Survey for more than 45 years, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital, of complications following an operation. He had been ill about two months.

Mr. Berry, who lived at 112 Franklin st., Kensington, Md., was a native of Nashville, Tenn. He was graduated from Vanderbilt University in 1901 as a civil engineer, and began work with the Geological Survey that same year.

World War I Veteran

Except for a year with the Isthmian Canal Commission in Panama in 1905, two years in the Army as an Engineer Corps captain during World War I, and several years as a pivate surveyor in the 1930s, Mr. Berry remained with the Bureau until his death.

One of the more topographically intricate problems Mr. Berry worked on was a relief map of the Mesa Verde National Park in Colorado. He received a meritorious award from the Interior Department for work on Pacific Island relief maps, especially of Japan, done for the United States Army in World War II.

Mr. Berry was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, a registered professional land surveyor, and a member of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Post No. 205, American Legion, which he served as adjutant for several years.

Requiem Mass Friday

In 1905 Mr. Berry married May O'Connor, who died in March of 1946.

He leaves two sons, Ralph Moore Berry, 75 Connecticut ave., Kensington, and William Leftwich Berry of Alfred-Ray rd., Kensington. An aunt, Mrs. Augusta K. Bashford of the Franklin st. address, and six grandchildren also survive.

Boy, 13, Acts Terribly Dashed When Mother Hesitates to Grant Him Permission to Have Dates; Now They Call for Objective Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am the mother of three children, and the eldest, Robert, is 13. He is a real good boy, has a newspaper route and earns his own money; and he always discusses his troubles or problems with me.

Now I have a problem, to wit: Robert has asked me if he might take a girl his own age to the movies, in company with his boy friend and another girl;—two couples, in other words.

I told Robert I thought he was a little too young for that, and he felt terribly let down about it. He said he wouldn't go as long as I felt that way; and then I told him I was going to put the question to you and see what you thought of it.

I have always admired your conscientious advice to others, and I plan to show Robert your reply, whatever it may be; so please answer soon. L. S.

Father's Views Seem Appropriate

DEAR L. S.: It seems to me that a sensible father's opinion might be helpful here, and therefore I have spoken with two fathers, each of whom has sons and daughters.

Incidentally, both fathers are serious students of adolescent psychology and parent-child relationships,—the one professionally, the other as an avocational interest: to improve his effectiveness as a parent.

The one father, a general practitioner of psychiatry—let's call him Dr. A,—said temperately that he agrees with you, a lad 13 is a bit too young to "date" a girl, if the date consists in visiting a public place of amusement in the evening, so that the youngsters would be out "on their own" without friendly adult supervision until 10 p. m. or later.

However, if Robert's idea is to make up a foursome, of two girls and his boy friend, for an afternoon movie—say on a Saturday, Sunday or other school holiday,—and the boys will head the girls home right after the show, maybe stopping long enough to provide a soda-fountain "treat," and the "date" will be over before dark, then Dr. A sees no objection to that. He merely reminds Robert and you that "a sense of discretion" should govern these things.

Certain Factors to Bear in Mind

THE OTHER father, Mr. B, boomed heartily that his son, 13, has been solo-dating a girl, 14, off and on this past winter, as a follow-up of summer companionship. The girl's family and the B-family have had neighboring seaside cottages for several years, and in town they live 15 minutes' driving-distance apart.

Johnnie has taken Sue to the movies three times, twice of afternoons, once in the evening, and once Sue took Johnnie to an evening church party, and he didn't get home until after 11 p. m., although his parents expected him an hour earlier. When the tardiness was pointed out, Johnnie explained he was playing pingpong at Sue's house after the party and forgot the clock.

Says Father B, "In giving leeway with discretion, you've got to understand your child and know the company he keeps. Johnnie is truthful and pretty conservative, and we know Sue and her folks—so maybe Johnnie's dating is a 'special case.'" He thinks Robert's parents should know something about Robert's friends and their families and home life, before the lad is given greenlight to "have girls."—whose influence on his character, for better or worse, will be considerable as time goes on. Women Would Rather Work for a Man But, Please Boss, Notice Her Clothes

Ten to one, women would rather work for a male executive than his feminine counterpart, reports the March issue of Charm, the magazine for the Business girl, after an "Office Routine" poll of typical young business girls in 32 cities across the country.

Among the suggestions for improving office routine, Charm's readers think that their bosses should set aside a specific time of day for dictation. This way, the girls could plan their work accordingly, and from the volume of dictation, they would know whether they were required to stay after hours to finish up.

A 15-minute break in the morning and afternoon would result in less wandering away from desks and less time spent in rest rooms, Charm's readers declared. While business girls are against the girl who rehashes last night's date via the office phone, they do feel that the boss should let his employe's conscience be the guide on the matter of personal phone calls. If some abuse the privilege, then discipline the culprits, not the whole office, Charm's readers say.

Pet peeves of secretaries, Charm found in its poll, are bosses who smoke a cigar while dictating and those who seem to be dictating to someone outside the window!

• The majority of girls polled felt that their employers had a sense of humor, that they usually gave clear instructions, and that they were courteous. But they had one completely feminine request to make: When your secretary is wearing a new dress or a new hat, please, Boss, notice it!

Among the guests were the French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet, the Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. van Kleffens, Justice and Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land, Countess Szechenyi and her daughter, Miss Sylvia Szechenyi; the Canadian Minister and Mrs. Thomas Stone, the former Polish Ambassador and Mme. Ciechanowska, Assistant Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Gordon Gray, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Glover, jr.

Others were Mr. and Mrs. Armistead Peter, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. David E. Finley, Howard Mitchell, conductor of the National Symphony, and Mrs. Mitchell; Capt. and Mrs. Charles H. Maddox, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Corrin Strong and Mr. and Mrs E. R. Finkenstaedt.

Mrs. Harry Vaughan Luncheon Hostess

MRS. HARRY VAUGHAN, wife of the President's military aide, was hostess at luncheon yesterday at the Army-Navy Club for Mrs. Frederick Witt, who will leave early in March with Mr. Witt for South Africa where they will spend the next year or longer.

Other guests were Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of the Florida Senator; Mrs. Elbert Thomas, wife of the Senator from Utah; Mrs. John R. Steelman, wife of the presidential assistant, and Mrs. Cyrus Ching, wife of the Director of Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Tarchianis Entertain For Departing Hondurans

THE Ambassador of Italy and Signora Tarchiani were hosts at a farewell dinner for the retiring Honduran Ambassador and Senora de Caceres last evening at the embassy.

Other guests were the Colombian Ambassador and Senora de Restrepo, the Ambassador of Guatemala and Senora de Gonzalez-Arevalo, the French Minister and Mme. Berard, Msgr. Emanuele Clarizio of the Apostolic Delegation, Mme. Boncompagni, Prof. Francesco Giordani, A. Tonello, and members of the Italian Embassy staff.

Brookes to Entertain For Archbishop

MR. AND MRS. FREDERICK H. BROOKE will entertain at an informal buffet supper this evening in honor of the Archbishop of China, His Eminence, Yu Pin.

The Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Wellington Koo will be among the guests and others who have been asked are Senator and Mrs. George Malone, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative Frances Bolton, Representative and Mrs. Robert Hale, Gen. Frank McCoy, chairman of the Far East Committee, and Mrs. McCoy, Miss Evelyn Nee, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock, Mrs. Mason Gulick, and the former United States Ambassador to China and Mrs. Nelson Johnson.

Morgenstiernes Hosts At Embassy Dinner

THE Norwegian Ambassador and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne were hosts at dinner last evening at the embassy.

NELSON ROCKEFELLER is congratulated by the Mexican Ambassador Rafael de la Colina after receiving the Order of the Aztec Eagle from the Mexican Government.

Mexico Gives Decorations to 27

By Marie McNair

MAJ. GEN. HARRY VAUGHAN, President Truman's Military Aide, stood up at the Mexican Embassy yesterday afternoon to have another medal pinned upon his chest.

He was one of 27 "distinguished Americans" awarded decorations by the Mexican government, with the Mexican Ambassador, Rafael de la Colina making the presentations. Afterward 1000 or more guests streamed in for a reception to celebrate the occasion.

Gen. Carl Spaatz and General Vaughan got the same Military Merit First Class. So did Gen. Jacob L. Devers, Lieut. Gen. George H. Brett, Maj. Gen. Frederick E. Irving, Brig. Gen. Gordon Young, District Engineer Commissioner; Maj. Paul B. Miller and Col. Bernard Cartmell, of Florida, whose deep blue enamel decoration was accepted for him by Mrs. Claude Pepper, pretty wife of Florida's senior Senator.

Rear Admiral James H. Foskett, Rear Admiral Clifford A. Swanson and Capt. Francis Ulen were presented with the Special Naval Award of Merit.

Grover Whalen Attends

Grover Whalen came down from New York to accept his turquoise blue and gold Order of the Aztec Eagle. Nelson Rockefeller, who used to be the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, was there to receive the same order, and with him, seeing old friends, was Mrs. Rockefeller in deep brown, with a hat of golden brown ostrich.

Also wearing the Aztec Eagle yesterday was Edgar Morris, and there to see the honor bestowed upon him was Mrs. Morris, in a black costume and enormous white orchids, pinned to her mink coat.

Mrs. Ogden Reid, Arthur Sulzberger of New York, were other wearers of the Aztec Eagle, F. S. Northrop, Commissioners John Russell Young and Guy Mason, Mrs. Helen L. Clagett, Morris L. Cooke, Clarence R. Decker, William E. Kemp and Jim McCord, Hugh Wasson, Mayor of Chattanooga, who was unable to be present and whose medal was accepted by Mrs. Joe L. Evins, wife of the Representative of Tennessee. Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State, was unable to be present and Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York, is holidaying in Nassau.

Standing to welcome the guests with the Ambassador and Senora de la Colina were the Military Attache of the Embassy, Lieut. Gen. Leobardo and the Naval Attache and Senora de Mercado.

Around the low neck of Senora de la Colina's gown, which combined almond green chartreuse in artful cut, was a garland of tiny purple orchids arranged with each petal in perfect design.

Around the bar and the buffet or in the ballroom entranced by the songs of Meche Flores in the native costume of Oaxaca were:

Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador; the Nicaraguan Ambassador, Guillermo Sevilla-Sacasa, the Finnish Minister, Dr. K. T. Jutila, the Dominican Ambassador and Senora de Thomen; the Luxembourg Minister, Hughes Le Gallais.

In the Throng

Through a sea of faces I saw Senator William Langer, heads above the crowd; little Mrs. Mike Monroney in a blond mink cape over her brown frock; Gen. Robert Walsh and Mrs. Walsh in a perky blue satin hat.

The James Soubys were there—it's not often that Mr. Souby can be lured to a party—and others were Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Whittemore, Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings Price, Dr. and Mrs. Albert Miller, Elmer Pratt, and Mrs. Pratt in brown lace with ermine jacket; Mr. and Mrs. Basil Toutorks, Mrs. Elonzo Tyner, and Col. Felipe Munilla, and Senora de Munilla, who told me they're returning to Cuba March 5.

Back From Florida

Greeted Mrs. Emerson Bigelow, and Mrs. Charles McEnerney; Mrs. Gardiner Luce in search of the punch; Mrs. Morris Cafritz just back from a fortnight in Florida; chatted with Mrs. Nathan Hurwitz, Admiral Clark Woodward, without his "Charlotte," who's due back from Florida early next month. "If she doesn't come back, I'm going down to get her," he said.

Gen. Patrick Hurley, Mrs. Hurley and their daughter, Mary Hope, were easily the best-looking family at the party. Tall, slim and platinum-haired, Mrs. Hurley in black, her honey-haired daughter, also in black, with a cuff collar of white, worn with a tiny black hat.

Soviet Party Celebrates Red Army Birthday

DOWN the street a few blocks the Soviet Embassy was celebrating the thirty-first anniversary of the founding of its Red Army, with the Military Attache, Maj. Gen. Ivan Bolshakov and Mme. Bolshakov, and the Naval Attache, Rear Admiral and Mme. Eugeni Glinkov, the hosts. The Ambassador, Alexander Panyushkin, was there, but in the role of guest.

A long buffet table was set up in the glittering red and gold ballroom with the usual lavish buffet of lobster, cold meats, salmon, mousses and a bowl of bright pink ice cream.

Largely a military party, I noticed little American top brass, a great many Russians.

Col. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, deputy liason officer for Col. Francis J. Grayling, was one of a trio of officers in a group and I saw Stanley Woodward, Chief of Protocol and Mrs. Woodward; the Finnish Minister, the Yugoslav Ambassador, Sava Kosanovich; Capt. Floyd Ferris, USN.; Admiral F. Stam, Naval Attache of the Netherlands Embassy and Commodore Fritz Kjoelsen, Naval Attache of the Danish Embassy.

Mrs. Linn Feted By Mrs. Morales

MRS. ISABEL MORALES entertained at luncheon yesterday for Mrs. Vicent Bliss Linn of Zanesville, Ohio, who is visiting her mother, Mrs. Thomas Dawson. Today Mrs. James Phalen will be hostess at luncheon followed by bridge for Mrs. Linn.

Dinner Given By Daughters Of Senators

One of the gayest parties on yesterday's slate was the dinner given by the Senate Daughters Club, a group composed of daughters and near relatives of Senators residing in the Capital.

The dinner was held in the Blue Room of the Shoreham Hotel and guests were entertained by Eddie Peabody, the "King of the Banjo."

Guests included the Misses Jeanne and Nina Watkins, daughters of Senator and Mrs. Arthur Watkins; Miss Patricia Capehart, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Homer E. Capehart; Miss Agnes Doherty, niece of Senator and Mrs. Joseph O'Mahoney; Miss Evelyn Kem, daughter of Senator and Mrs. James P. Kem; Miss Norine McCarran, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Pat McCarran; Mrs. Lorna Watkins, daughter-in-law of Senator and Mrs. Watkins; Maj. and Mrs. Patrick Sullivan and Mr. and Mrs. Prew Savoy.

Preceding the dinner, Miss Doherty entertained at cocktails at the apartment of Senator and Mrs. O'Mahoney, with whom she makes her home.

Brazilian Club Elects Officers

The Brazilian Ambassador Mauricio Nabuco was named honorary president and Dr. J. Silvado Bueno, trade adviser of the Pan American Union, was elected president of the newly-formed Brazilian Club of Washington.

Others elected at the recent dinner meeting held in the New Colonial Hotel were Frank Oran, vice president; Clara Hasslocher and Benedicta Quirinos dos Santos, secretaries.

Son to Cornwalls

Mr. and Mrs. John Sinclair Cornwall of San Francisco, are receiving congratulations on the birth of their first son, Michael Kevin Cornwall at Children's Hospital, San Francisco, on February 12.

Mrs. Cornwall is the former Miss Jean Campbell Armstrong, daughter of Mr and Mrs. W. Campbell Armstrong of Washington and New York.

To Hear Mr. Graham

The Junior League of Washington will have a dinner meeting on Monday, February 28, at the Chevy Chase Club. Philip Graham, publisher of The Washington Post, will speak on "The United States and European Recovery."

Catholic Daughters Shocked, Amazed at 'Mercy Death' Idea

By Nicha Soure

The Catholic Daughters of America governing board yesterday made public its "shocking amazement" at proposed "mercy killings" in statements which will guide the policy of 1500 CDA units throughout the country.

"We are amazed and shocked," the board wrote, "at the action of a group of ministers and rabbis who petitioned the Legislature of New York State to legalize so-called 'mercy killings.'"

The statement directed that member units side with "intelligent Americans" who disown "such brutality," which the board found "contrary to both the law of nature and the Divine positive law."

Other statements drawn up at the semiannual board meeting, in lieu of resolutions, favored public housing legislation and Federal aid to education.

The board will complete its three-day session at the Statler today.

Federal aid to education is the only adequate way to correct the inequalities in the Nation's school systems, the board decided. But this aid should be given to all American children, whether the schools are under private or public auspices.

"We are asking for what justice demands and the Constitution permits," the statement said.

The board favored special consideration for the American family in the $2000 to $3000 dollar income group in public housing legislation, since "they frequently suffer most."

Favor Health Insurance

Efforts of Government to give some kind of medical and hospital assistance are not necessarily socialized medicine, the board held.

"From a Christian and democratic point of view," the board selected the health-insurance method as the best form of Government health aid.

Divorce came under scrutiny of the board, which declared "marriage is a divine institution" and "man should stop tinkering with it." But the CDA was heartened by "some people who were beginning to worry out loud about the American divorce rate."

Restating their attack on the unjust trial of Cardinal Mindszenty, the board expressed sympathy for those religions leaders who have been attacked by the "atheistic, communistic usurpers of Hungary and Bulgaria." The board had sent a letter to President Truman Tuesday urging him to "take the offensive" in the Catholic cardinal's trial and imprisonment.

For DP Legislation

In a report to the board yesterday morning, Miss Mary McKeough recommended legislation for the resettlement of displaced persons, increasing the United States quota from 205,000 to 400,000 immigrants.

Mrs. McKeough also proposed the present eligibility date be changed from December 22, 1945, to December 31, 1948 to take care of the refugees forced to flee countries behind the Iron Curtain.

Miss Margaret J. Buckley in a report on Government legislation before the board yesterday morning commended the Un-American Activities Committee for "its defensive work during the last 10 years. "Its work should be continued," she said, "in order to give Congress and the people needed information on communism as the surest way of awakening public sentiment against this danger."

Spot Removal—Step by Step

What you use to take out a spot on clothes depends on what made the spot, says the Woman's Home Companion. However, there are a few general rules which apply to all types of stains. First, household investment should be a good all-purpose cleaner because it contains a solvent for grease. Next step in spot removal is to determine the cause of the spot. Third step is to go into action as soon as possible, before the spot can "set." An important step in spot removal is to always use a clean bath towel or similar pad under the fabric to help absorb part of the stain. If it's an ice cream stain you want to remove from Johnny's party coat here is the procedure: First, wipe the excess ice cream from the fabric, then apply cleaning fluid sparingly. A brisk cleaning with soapy water follows the cleaning fluid and then a final rinsing with clear water.

Tips on Topping Cake With Cream Curlicues

By Lucia Brown

CREAM that stays sweet for months—cream that always whips when you beat it—whipped cream decorations that are firm even after 10 hours of standing on a cake.

Maybe it sounds a little like a dream. Or maybe it doesn't, if some members of your family served at a military establishment overseas during the war and there enjoyed a product that reached the Washington market this week—sterilized, vacuum-bottled whipping cream.

It took eight years of research to perfect this cream and just as it was ready to go on sale, the war broke out. Every bit that could be made was sent to the armed forces for a long time. Only recently has it become available to the public in substantial quantity.

Made of real dairy cream, the product is sterilized by a quick process that kills all the germs, doesn't damage the flavor. (The more familiar process of pasteurization kills germs harmful to humans but not the ones that turn cream sour.) This new cream has nothing added except a tiny amount of vegetable stabilizer to prevent separation during storage. It will keep under refrigeration in its sealed bottle for months. Once the bottle is opened, it will keep about 10 days in the refrigerator.

SINCE it not only whips faster and stiffer than ordinary cream but stays whipped longer, it is especially recommended for decorating cakes and desserts. Along with its introduction here, the home service department of its manufacturer has issued a few timely tips for successful cake decorating:

1. A half bottle of the sterilized cream gives you plenty for making top and side decorations on a 10 or 12-inch cake. Use about 1 teaspoon powdered sugar and ¼ teaspoon vanilla to a half bottle of cream. Color as desired.

2. On an iced cake, mark lettering and design in outline with the point of a knife before you start. Fill pastry bag half full of whipped cream then squeeze out a little back into the bowl to release any air in bag.

3. Use nozzle with small plain opening (illustration No. 1) for straight lines first—lettering stems, etc. Hold it against cake at an angle and work toward yourself. Printing is easier than script.

4. Nozzles of the type shown in illustration 2 are for flowers. Hold tube directly against cake (pastry bag held straight up) and press bag gently, lifting tube at same time until you have flower of desired size.

5. To make leaves, use the nozzle (shown) in illustration 3. Place tube against cake and start with the broad base of the leaf by holding tube at an angle and pressing the tube away from starting point to bring the end of leaf to narrow point.

YOU can experiment with the other nozzles in your set in making scallops and borders around the sides and along the edge of your cake. At least one of the other nozzles in standard decorating sets can be used for flowers, too. With a little practice, you can make all sorts of flowers, even big roses.

After cake or dessert is decorated, keep it in the refrigerator and the sterilized cream will stand up without becoming watery for at least 10 hours and perhaps longer.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

To many an adult there's something satisfying about neatness and order. Not all of us, of course, find ourselves uncomfortable about disorder, but a majority of people like to see things in their place.

Children are usually less concerned. Indeed a good many of them seem happier when things are "higgledy-piggledy." At least it would seem that way. For it takes so little time for them to make a shambles of mother's tidying up. Gradually perhaps they may learn to like order, but it isn't something that comes early with most youngsters.

Order can be a disease. The person who can't sit still while anything is out of place, who is made acutely uncomfortable by even minor untidiness may very well make others uncomfortable. If a mother must see to it that things are straightened up first no matter what a child has to tell her or how engrossed he may be in his own activities, she's probably putting too much emphasis on what is, in general, a good thing.

One convenient guide to the "middle road," as far as neatness and order are concerned, might be stated this way:

"Don't expect minute-by-minute order, but be satisfied if things are straightened up once a day or so."

Jango Board Honor Guests At Luncheon

A FAREWELL luncheon for outgoing officers and board members of Jango was given yesterday in the holiday room of Westchester Apartments by Mrs. Merlin O'Neill, wife of Rear Admiral O'Neill, assistant commandant of the Coast Guard.

Mrs. John H. Neill, jr., retiring president of the Junior Army Navy Guild Organization, was honor guest. The hostess is a retiring board member.

In addition to other leaders in the guild's activities, the guest list included Mrs. John W. Snyder, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Edward H. Foley, wife of the Undersecretary of the Treasury; Mrs. J. F. Farley, wife of Admiral Farley, commandant of the Coast Guard, Mrs. McCook Knox and Mrs. Jouett Shouse. Mrs. John W. Bowman of Annapolis, a former Jango president, was also there to say hello to her old friends.

Luncheon Parties

Mrs. George Mesta had four guests lunching with her at La Salle du Bois yesterday. Also entertaining there at luncheon was Dr. Eugene de Savitsch, who was host to five. Dr. and Mrs. Robert Moran were lunching together before taking off for Mobile, Ala., to spend a week.

Making Lingerie Debut This Week

AN undergarment that has fashion significance is the new high-waisted girdle, made by Lily of France.

Making its debut on the local market this week, this girdle gives promise of being able to "do things" for the feminine form. Its prime aim is to flatten the midriff, and do away with the bulging waistline that is the bane of so many women's lives. Molded to the average figure, the girdle is cut to scoop in at the waistline and out again as it spans the figure for two or three inches over the diaphragm. Tiny, pliable "bones" hold it in place, preventing it from rolling down at the top.

It is completely elasticized with the exception of two wide bands, back and front, of nylon satin. Easy to wash and comfortable to wear, it has one additional good feature. It weighs only eight ounces.

Fetching Fashion

TOO, TOO NEW—and cute— is the little garment (at left) which covers the top portion of our model's figure. You'd never guess it, but it is actually a blouse-bra, cunningly designed to do the double duty its name implies. Made of printed, washable seersucker, it has an elasticized neckline which allows it to be worn either on or off the shoulder. Eliminating the need for an undergarment, it is bound to be a favorite in the beachwear and playclothes division this summer. May be worn with swimming trunks, shorts, slacks or skirts. For more formal wear, it can be matched with a long skirt and cummerbund for the "covered-up" look. Will be available in local shops after March 1.

Preview of the fetching fashion item took place here yesterday, when it was modeled at the monthly meeting of the Women's Advertising Club at the Washington Hotel. Honor guests were representatives of the Warner Brothers Co., the corsetry firm which makes the bra.

About Painting Bookcases

I'm contemplating buying some "unfinished" bookcases to put in my living room and would like to know how to stain them a dark mahogany to match my other furniture, which has a glossy finish. Or, would it be more desirable to paint them to blend in with my color scheme?
J. H. W.

Furniture which is bought unfinished is usually pine—a soft wood with an uninteresting grain. Because of this, paint is considered the best finish because it completely covers the grain. However, if your pieces are reasonably free from knots you could apply two or three coats of mahogany varnish stain to give them a glossy, mahogany colored finish. This finish cannot be expected to exactly match hardwood mahogany because of the difference in grain of the foundation woods.

For Christmas we received a Kentucky home-cured ham. We cut it in half, used one half, wrapped the other half in wax paper and stored it in a cool closet. Last week I got it out to use it and found that it was covered on the cut end with a green-yellow-white mold. I cut off a thin slice and the meat looks and smells all right, but is it safe to eat? It is now stored in the refrigerator awaiting your reply.
E. S.

Yes, the ham is perfectly safe to eat. Before cooking it, cut away a thin slice from the cut end to remove the mold. Scrape or wipe away the mold from the other surfaces of the ham and wash with clean water and a stiff brush.

I wish to obtain some screening for a small porch. I am told there is screening made which one may see out and it is not possible to see in. All my attempts to locate a dealer handling such a product have been futile. Can you help?
R. K. F.

I've discussed your question with a man who has been in the screening business for many years and he says he knows of no such screen. However, of the many types of screens on the market, some give more privacy than others. On the market today are screen cloths made of bronze, aluminum, plastic, galvanized and steel wires. Of these, the screens of plastic offer the most privacy because they are slightly more closely woven and come in light colors. The lighter the color of the screen, the more privacy it offers. Another screen on the market which offers some privacy is made of flat strands of wire about ⅛ inch wide. These strands are set at a 17 degree angle to prevent entrance of the sun rays except when the sun is low. Made on this Venetian blind principle, they admit the air without the hot rays of the sun. These are more expensive than other types of screens and require professional installation.

Inquiries and contributions to the "Ask Anne" column must be in written form. We regret that time does not permit handling them by telephone. Address letters or cards to Anne, Room 403, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C.

PETUNIA!

Right, Petunia! Take a model's tip: blot your lipstick, powder over it, apply again, let it dry for five minutes—and it won't smear, even through a heavy meal.

Bishop-Braken

About Five Minutes Longer

Add just about five minutes to your retiring schedule and take time to hang your frock on a hanger and place over the outside of the closet door to air during the night. Put your shoe trees in your shoes and hang up your underwear instead of throwing it just anywhere. Remove your make-up regularly as you clean your teeth before retiring. The extra five minutes will be well spent.

Baked Potatoes and Eggs

Leftover mashed potatoes may be spread over a baking dish and hollows made in which eggs can be dropped; bake in a moderate oven until the eggs are firm and the potatoes thoroughly heated, then garnish with paprika and parsley before serving.

For Luncheons, Bridge Parties

For luncheon or bridge parties, shape ¾ lb. sausage meat into patties ½ inch thick. Fry and remove from pan. Keep hot. Core but do not peel 3 red Washington Winesap apples. Slice into rings and saute in small amount of sausage fat. Place a sausage patty and an apple slice on buttered toast. Garnish with bacon curls. Serve with cole slaw.

There Ought to Be a Law

Congressman Would Outlaw Shipping, Buying, Selling, But Not Shooting the Bull

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

LUCKILY, there's still considerable humor lying around loose on this weary planet. Lately, the mailman's been leaving an assortment of giddy documents dispatched by anonymous tongue-in-cheek contributors from overseas and right here. Most recent addition traveled from no further than our Capitol building. It's House Bill No. 2779, introduced on February 16 by Representative William T. Byrne of New York. The pamphlet starts: "A Bill to prohibit the transportation in interstate or foreign commerce of bulls with intent to use such bulls for bull fighting and for other purposes." It continues in full-blown legal language, sometimes known as "gobbledegook."

Smoke or Fire?

"BE IT enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That (a) it shall be unlawful to deliver or receive for transportation, or to transport, by any means whatsoever, in interstate or foreign commerce any bull with intent that, or with knowledge of intent that, such bull will be used for bull fighting, for mock, or simulated, bull fighting (or any other form of baiting or infuriating a bull for public entertainment), or for breeding or producing a type or variety of bull which is adapted to, and, outside the United States generally used for, bull fighting. It shall be unlawful knowingly to purchase or receive any bull which has been transported in violation of any provision of this subsection.

"(b) Whoever violates any provisions of subsection (a) shall be fined not more than $1000 or imprisoned not more than six months, or both."

Where there's smoke, there must be fire. Could there be sneak bull fights in Mr. Byrne's district? As an old bull-fight aficionada, we'd love to see one. Ole! Mr. Byrne! Toro! Ole!

Mr. Franklin's Speculation

SOME weeks ago journalist Jay Franklin caused no end of rumpus with a Life article predicting a softening in our foreign policy attitude towards the U. S. S. R. Within a few weeks Mr. Franklin, in the same publication, will delicately take apart our future domestic policy. Mr. Franklin, who's real name is John Franklin Carter, was a member of President Truman's speech-writing staff, traveling on the campaign train and is author of innumerable detective stories and fiction set against a political background. Nowadays, speculation, it seems, pays off in cold cash far better than hard facts.

Book Aid Plan

ONE of the most potent means of combatting communism is to enable Europeans, especially the youth, to learn more about democracy as it is practiced here. The easiest way of demonstration is via books and magazines. Throughout the continent books, libraries were destroyed during the war. And the situation is particularly acute in Germany where the Nazis burnt hundreds of thousands of books, replacing them with their own propaganda literature. Then, the Nazis' works, in turn, were destroyed by Allied forces. To fill this void, to propagandize inexpensively and painlessly, the small town of Darien, Connecticut, has come up with a sensible idea.

It's called the Book Aid Plan and is under the joint honorary chairmanship of Representative John Lodge and General Leslie Groves, of atomic warfare fame. The Book Aid Plan is sensible. Darien residents are asked to save all their magazines, worthwhile books which have served their purpose.

Then Darien school children will collect and store them. The collections will be screened for suitability, and packed by volunteers. To help defray packing and expressage, the Book Aid Plan has launched a membership drive.

The books will be shipped to a New York Army post number and distributed overseas by competent authorities selected by General Clay. Most needed are picture books for young readers, story books for youngsters, histories and social science for all ages; art and music books, classics. Unwanted are newspapers, news magazines, sensational fiction, pulp and true story magazines. All in all, its a wonderful plan which could be carried out easily in almost any community.

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

PLAYWRIGHT and former Congresswoman Clare Boothe Luce (center), laughingly revealed that she now has a brand new role—grandmother. She broke the news to Mrs. Verna D. Linzel, executive director of the Washington Area Office, National Conference of Christian and Jews (left), and Gilbert Harrison, national chairman of the American Veterans Committee. Mrs. Luce and Harrison appeared as guest speakers at the "Brotherhood" meeting sponsored yesterday by the Women's Activities Committee, Washington Area Office of NCCJ, in Hotel 2400

Clare Luce Asks Selfless Brotherhood

By Genevieve Reynolds

Former Congresswoman Clare Boothe Luce warned yesterday that "back-scratching, log-rolling, self-interest type of brotherhood" would fail to save the Western World in its "twilight fight for Christianity."

She issued her warning in a speech at Hotel 2400 before the National Conference of Christians and Jews. The meeting, sponsored by the Women's Activity Committee of NCCJ, was one of many events highlighting "Brotherhood Week."

"Spiritual imagination is needed more today than at any time since the rise of Christianity," she declared. "A new paganism—and what is worse—a most aggressive atheism, threatens all freedom and liberty of brotherhood.

'Plans Are But the Fruits'

"We shall not save the world with the United Nations or World Government, or World Federation or the Marshall Plan, or the Atlantic Alliance, or increased social security or medical care for all, or with or without the control of atomic energy. Such plans as these contain much good. But they are the fruits, rather than the vine, from which we can pluck the good fruits of brotherhood."

She emphasized that the only kind of brotherly love that could save the world "is spiritual love" and challenged the churches to promote that feeling.

Crisis brotherhood smacks too much of the self-love that includes one's neighbor "solely in order to get one's self included in some benefit," she said, adding, "What we want and must have, if the world is not to go smack bang to bloody bits in the next two decades, is a brotherhood born of selfless love."

'Equal Access'

Gilbert Harrison, national chairman, American Veterans Committee, told some 400 persons present that brotherhood should mean "equal access to any place for every American."

He cited the Nation's Capital as one city failing to live up to the ideals of brotherhood.

"In my office I employ Negro clerks and secretaries," he asserted, "but they have to bring their lunches in paper bags because they aren't allowed in public restaurants."

Harrison recalled that while in Europe last year people of various countries questioned the United States' claims to democracy because of the South's treatment of the Negro.

"We're competing with the Soviet Union, which promises all things to the little man," he explained. "We must not only talk but do for the little man.

"The necessity of performing brotherhood now is greater than ever before," he concluded. "We're having to prove our right to leadership by living up to the ideals of democracy and brotherhood."

Mrs. Harold H. Burton, who presided at the afternoon session, reminded the audience, "You can't take anything for granted—democracy, religion, freedom or brotherhood. The keywords should be: 'Are we doing enough?'"

Giving brief speeches as representatives of their respective organizations were Mrs. Nathan Simkowitz, president, B'nai B'rith women, Argo; Mrs. Joseph Egan, president, Sodality Union, and Mrs. Wallace N. Streeter, president, Washington Council of Church Women.

Participating also in the program were two Howard University students, Robert Lawes, soloist, and Altrus Fleming, pianist.

Jewish Aid Group Holds Annual Donor Banquet

The Intermediate group of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society held its fifth annual donor banquet at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday.

Dr. Aaron Saidman, who has recently returned from Denver, reported on the sanatorium in Denver, Colo., which is maintained by the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society.

Mrs. Sidney M. Goldstein was chairman and Mrs. Henry Weiss, co-chairman of the donor banquet.

Jewish Women's Council Marks 'Brotherhood Week'

As part of the program for "National Brotherhood Week," the Greenbelt Section, National Council of Jewish Women held a tea yesterday for the chairman of all women's civic and religious groups of the community in the Center School.

Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel, president of the Woman's Auxiliary of Episcopal Church of the Diocese of Washington, spoke on "How Cooperation of Women's Groups Can Help a Community."

Swing Aboard!

Don't Sit Out the Next Number; A Tune's a Streamliner Ticket

By Ida Jean Kain

A little mood music, please . . . exercising to the rhythm of music gives a lift, physically and mentally. Even when you are not in the mood for exercise, as soon as you feel the rhythm it takes hold.

A gay note from a reader gave me a lift and a chuckle . . . "One day I hope to be able to waltz into a record shop and call for the latest Waist-Whittling by IJK with Vaughn Monroe."

Ah, day dreams—but turn on a tune and take it on the upswing . . . "Powder Your Face with Sunshine" . . . stretch-all-the-bulges-away. Come on! Don't sit this one out—it's a natural for rhythm stretching.

To make it smooth, we'll have a continuous flow of movement, for streamlines and curves. Stretch right arm overhead as right leg is swung back . . . and pull smooth through the midriff as you circle arm around and back down . . . For an uninterrupted flow, as the arm comes around on the downbeat and the foot comes back into position, swing into the rhythm with left arm and left leg, free and easy. A rhythmic stretch-swing streamlines the midsection as it lifts the chest and builds lovely curves.

Swing and Sway

Now step it off . . . stepping back in time to the rhythm, swinging alternate arms up, around and down . . . relaxing to mellow music. A backward swing of the arms is preferable since it coaxes the shoulders into beautiful line.

Now sway to the tune of "I'd Like To Get You on a Slow Boat To . . ." you know where . . .

Are arms overhead, ballet style, and swaying slowly sideward, keep reaching out with the top arm . . . toward the faraway shore. R-e-a-c-h! Sway rhythmically toward the other shore, again reaching out with top arm. For footwork, point toes out to the side in the opposite direction from the bend—get a tip-to-toe stretch. It's a fast streamliner.

Buttons and Bows

For balance, try this to the tune of "Buttons and Bows" . . .

Stand on right foot, right hand poised lightly on chair back for balance, (if necessary). Swing left leg and left arm forward, then swing away back with both the arm and the leg, and let the momentum carry you forward at the waist. Continue the swing with the body moving as a unit. Swing-bend about 25 counts, then swing into position on the other side.

In exercising to music, feel the rhythm and let it flow from one movement to another. Swinging through three records a day is enough for the first week's session. It's easy to overdo with music . . .

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Snail's Native Habitat Seems to Be 'Java'

The other day a District Liner raised a questioning eyebrow about the news report that Robert Mitchum's jail menu included "glazed snails." I joined in the wonderment.

Nine other alert readers have come forward to enlighten us—and assure us that Old Droopy Eyes is eating the same kind of breakfast as millions of folks who are not being detained in stone colleges.

Here are some excerpts from the mail bag:

"A glazed snail is a sweet roll—a standard breakfast item in California." (V. G. Griffin.)

"Don't feel sorry for Mitchum—we call them coffee rolls here." (R. A. Bernazzani, AD1, Naval Air Station, Patuxent River, Md.)

"One morning in Long Beach, Calif., I almost fell off the counter stool when the native next to me ordered a snail. But it's just a pastry bun." (Marguerite J. Hartman, 714 Stonestreet ave., Rockville, Md.)

"A glazed snail is not the little animal you're thinking of; it's known as Danish pastry here." (Mrs. Paul Battista, 2757 S. Glebe rd., Arlington, Va.)

"As one who lived in California for a number of years, I recall that it's a sweet roll, or bun." (Nora Jeffries, 3912 N. 5th st., Arlington, Va.)

"Lower your eyebrows; they're also known as 'butterhorns'—but I don't know how they came to be called snails." (Ann V. Fleming, 130 Irvington st. sw.)

"It's a bun shaped like a snail." (Mrs. S. J. Tremper, 3000 Adams st. ne.)

"The first thing I saw when I stepped off the train at Oakland, Calif., was a sign at the station refreshment stand offering 'Snail and Coffee, 20 cents.' On investigation, I found that the snails are a delicious form of pastry with a little curlicue in the middle which somewhat resembles the shape of a real snail." (Mrs. Edward R. O'Brien, 1825 New Hampshire ave. nw.)

"And it's also called a New Yorker, and a bow tie. But a bun by any other name is still a sweet roll to me." (Mrs. P. S. Vetter, 3120 N. Pershing dr., Arlington, Va.)

SAME DIFFERENCE

The Russians say they've been "compelled" to increase their military strength "because of international tension."

Inasmuch as the dead-pan Soviets don't seem to remember who created that tension, permit me to recall the story of the boy who shot his mother and father and then pleaded for mercy on the grounds he was an orphan.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Mary Plum writes: "This stuff about misleading nomenclatures of rivers reminds me about the most surprising one of all. Ask your readers to guess the name of the river which runs through Oklahoma City, in the State of Oklahoma."

When you're ready to give up, the answer is: "The North Branch of the Canadian River."

HIGH C'S

This is a story about a ship that constantly finds itself heavy with C's.

The captain of the ship is Edward Couples of 14 Tansey dr., Falls Church, Va. His co-pilot is Richard A. Collins of the Hunting Terrace Apartments, Alexandria, Va. The hostess' name also begins with a C—she's Jeanne Crocco of 1300 S. Barton st., in Arlington.

To make sure you C's the point of this item, the ship they fly is a Constitution, and it's owned by Capital Airlines.

The Airline doesn't know whether the C coincidence has anything to do with it, but there hasn't been a cancellation on the Constitution in the past year. They think that's unusual enough to rate an item.

And I do, too. C what I mean?

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Yeah, I know it's spring again tra la, but I still think we're going to have one more snow.

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Robert E. Sherwood, author of "Miss Liberty"—the show for which Irving Berlin is writing the music—has discovered that writing a musical comedy is far different from playwriting. Berlin gave him an elementary lesson in this field last week. "It's exactly like vaudeville," the songwriter told the Pulitzer Prize playwright. "When the music stops—you're on."

Leon Leonidoff, who produces the brilliant spectacles at Radio City Music Hall, gave a similar lesson to Laurence Stallings when "Virginia" was produced at the Center Theater. Stallings, who had worked carefully on the script, watched Leonidoff rehearsing the involved production numbers. "And now," he heard Leonidoff tell the stage-full of dancers and singers, "We must wait: Comes a few words."

Ned Calmer, the CBS commentator, had a short-wave conversation with Paul Renaud, France's wartime Premier. It was an informal talk, preparatory to Reynaud's making a recording for Calmer's use. "By the way," Calmer said, "we've all been reading about you in Winston Churchill's memoirs, which are being published here day by day" . . . "Really?" replied Reynaud. "Well, just wait till you Americans start reading about Winston Churchill in MY memoirs."

Joe Di Maggio was in Mexico last week, vacationing at Acapulco. He did some duck-shooting after obtaining a gun with great difficulty—because the Mexican government is careful about the distribution of these weapons deemed invaluable to revolutionaries . . . Di Maggio was invited to visit the ball park where the Santa Clara team was playing, and when the crowd insisted that he take a few swings with a bat, Joe obliged, and stepped up to the plate. He hadn't swung a bat since last fall. The pitcher threw a fast curve, and Di Maggio was startled to hear an umpire shout "Strike One." He realized that the Mexican pitcher was bidding for glory—a chance to strike out Di Maggio. The count went to three and two. Then Joe hit a line-drive to left field, and returned to vacationing, his reputation intact.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Britain in Pact; Irish Say 'No'

By Drew Pearson

All the diplomats in Dublin can't persuade pugnacious, little Ireland to join the North Atlantic Pact—if it means signing up as an ally of Great Britain.

Pearson

This has been made clear in simple, blistering Irish.

Writing to members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Irish Minister Sean Nunan explained bluntly that his government couldn't enter "any military alliance involving joint military action with the state which was responsible for the partition of Ireland (and) which continues to occupy a portion of the country with its armed force."

In red-pepper language, Nunan continued: "No Irish government could possibly expect to find the necessary support for a policy involving military alliance with a power that continues to lend sanction, tacit or active, to evils of the very kind which it is the objective of the proposed North Atlantic Pact to oppose and prevent."

Capital News Capsules

Division in Moscow—Uncensored diplomatic dispatches now report at least two distinct cleavages inside the Soviet Politburo. The 14 Soviet leaders are split over "war or peace." A number of the younger men around Stalin and Molotov think war will come this summer because the United States is headed for a depression. But another faction is eager for United States appeasement because American public opinion has become so strongly anti-Russian.

Soviet Nosiness—The Russian news agency, Tass, has been asking frequent questions around the Army and Navy Departments. The latest so-called news story, which Tass has been snooping after, is the Air Force's specifications for high-octane gasoline. Believe it or not, but Uncle Sam's big-hearted policy is to give the Russians whatever information they want—as long as it isn't officially classified as secret.

Poor Trigve Lie—The State Department is considering asking for the recall of Trigve Lie as secretary-general of the United Nations—because Lie criticized the North Atlantic Pact as undermining the United Nations. The State Department claims the pact will strengthen, not hurt the United Nations, and it's sore as blazes at Trigve Lie, whose criticism, it claims, follows Moscow's propaganda line.

Michigander Helps Michigander—Senator Vandenberg has taken a sudden interest in the Senate's investigation of the alleged Michigan vote frauds which put his junior colleague, Senator Ferguson, back into office. Vandenberg has written three letters, one to Rules Chairman Carl Hayden of Arizona and two to Elections Chairman Francis Meyer of Pennsylvania, asking that the impounded Michigan ballot boxes be released so as to be used in local primary elections held earlier this week. It turned out, however, that only 15 counties were holding elections so Senate investigators speeded up their examination of ballots in those counties. Vandenberg also wrote another letter, requesting a complete report of the Elections Subcommittee's findings on Ferguson.

Bolstering China—The inside reason why former Mayor Roger Lapham of San Francisco suddenly rushed to Washington from China is that Lapham, now Marshall Plan Administrator for China, believes he can make the Nationalist government hold out. Lapham wants to set up the Chinese Nationalists on Formosa, which the Communists could not invade and which would be supplied with Marshall Plan aid. Formosa might later become a permanent American base. General MacArthur is 100 per cent for Lapham's plan.

Secret Discussion on Pact

In a secret huddle with Secretary of State Acheson the Senate Foreign Relations Committee the other day explored every comma and semicolon in the North Atlantic Pact. This is the important alliance that could plunge the United States into war if one of the European democracies should be attacked by Russia.

Although the Senators were pledged to strict secrecy, here are the highlights of that important meeting: Acheson promised to write into the pact a clear and expressed provision that this country cannot go to war without following the Constitutional processes.

This means it will still be up to Congress to declare war. However, the State Department will assure the world that a solemn treaty, ratified by Congress, can be taken as a strong warning that Congress will act. Although the exact wording hasn't been decided, the pact will state essentially that aggression against any of the signatory nations will be considered as aggression against them all.

Some Senators, led by Massachusetts' Henry Cabot Lodge, wanted the pact even more ironclad. On the other hand the question was raised whether a statement by the President wouldn't do just as well, warning that aggression against the western democracies would be considered an unfriendly act toward this country. The idea would be to lay a Monroe Doctrine for Europe.

Arkansas' Senator William Fulbright asked whether civil war, incited by the Communists, would be considered as aggression since our own country was born by revolution.

Florida's Senator Claude Pepper, on the other hand, expressed worry over setting a precedent of regional alliances. He wanted to know whether other alliances in the Far East and Mediterranean might follow and tear the heart out of the United Nations.

Quibbles Waste Time

These and other questions were left partly in the air. So much of the time was exhausted over technical points, such as whether the word "any" should be considered singular or plural, that Senator Fulbright finally pleaded that they get on to the main issue.

There was only one mild flare-up—when Senator Brien McMahon of Connecticut warned that the issue would be raised again on the Senate floor that this country cannot pledge to fight, since it is up to Congress to declare war. This has already been brought up by Senators Tom Connally and Arthur Vandenberg.

Too much reiteration, warned McMahon, might create distrust in Europe.

"What reiteration?" snapped Vandenberg, toughly. "Oh," shrugged McMahon, "I mean what the President has been saying."

U. S. to Provide Britain With Fifty Geologists

London, Feb. 23 (AP).—Britain today received approval to use Economic Cooperation Administration funds to hire 50 American geologists for research in British territories in Africa.

The project was formed as a means of maintaining geological survey work despite the shortage of British geologists, caused by the curtailment of training during the war.
